QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. What disciplinary sanction should be imposed after respondent's conviction of a serious crime?
2. What conditions should govern respondent's potential reinstatement after suspension?

HOLDINGS

1. Respondent should be suspended from the practice of law for one year, effective October 25, 2017, or until termination of her federal probation, whichever period is shorter.
2. Any application for reinstatement must comply with 22 NYCRR 1240.16 and must additionally include a report from respondent's mental-health treatment provider confirming continued treatment and compliance with treatment recommendations.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Respondent, an attorney admitted in New York, pleaded guilty in federal court to falsely reporting the presence of a bomb at the James M. Hanley Federal Building in Syracuse. The federal court imposed one year of probation, a $20,000 fine, 250 hours of community service, and mental-health treatment. In mitigation, respondent cited extreme work and family stress, an otherwise unblemished disciplinary history, ongoing mental-health treatment, and sincere remorse.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Respondent pleaded guilty in the United States District Court for the Northern District of New York to falsely reporting an incident in the third degree. The Appellate Division determined that the conviction constituted a serious crime, suspended respondent on an interim basis effective October 25, 2017, and directed her to show cause why a final disciplinary order should not be entered. After respondent submitted mitigation and appeared before the court, the court imposed a final one-year suspension, subject to an earlier termination upon the end of federal probation.
