SUMMARY

Atkins’s pro se 42 U.S.C. § 1983 complaint alleging that Tennessee Department of Correction officials transferred him in retaliation for filing and prevailing in lawsuits. The court allowed First Amendment retaliation claims to proceed against the defendants in their individual and official capacities, but dismissed official-capacity claims for money damages on sovereign-immunity grounds.

PRACTICE AREAS

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the complaint stated a colorable First Amendment retaliation claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on Atkins's prison transfer after filing and prevailing in lawsuits.
2. Whether the alleged transfer was sufficiently adverse to support a First Amendment retaliation claim.
3. Whether Atkins's official-capacity claims for money damages were barred by Eleventh Amendment sovereign immunity.
4. Whether official-capacity claims seeking injunctive relief could proceed against TDOC officials.

HOLDINGS

1. The complaint stated viable First Amendment retaliation claims against the defendants in their individual and official capacities based on the alleged retaliatory transfer.
2. The alleged transfer to Trousdale Turner Correctional Center was capable of deterring a person of ordinary firmness from continuing to engage in protected conduct and therefore could constitute adverse action.
3. The defendants were immune from Atkins's claims for money damages in their official capacities because those claims were treated as claims against TDOC, an arm of the State of Tennessee.
4. Atkins's official-capacity claims seeking injunctive relief were properly before the court and were allowed to proceed.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“A reasonable jury could conclude that a transfer to TTCC is capable of deterring a person of ordinary firmness from continuing to engage in protected conduct such as filing a lawsuit.” (Section II.C)

“The court’s determination that the complaint states a colorable claim for purposes of this initial screening does not preclude the court from dismissing any claim at any time for reasons set forth in 28 U.S.C. § 1915(e)(2), nor does it preclude Defendant from filing a motion to dismiss under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12.” (Section III)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Atkins, an inmate, was transferred from the Northeast Correctional Complex to the Trousdale Turner Correctional Center on September 5, 2024, shortly after prevailing in a Tennessee Department of Correction Board of Claims action and on the day of the final hearing in another successful lawsuit against TDOC. He alleged that the transfer was retaliatory and caused him to lose employment, educational opportunities, law-library access, and regular religious services, while exposing him to worse conditions, including reduced recreation and pervasive violence, drugs, fumes, and secondhand smoke. He alleged that TDOC officials David Sutton, Linda Thomas, and unidentified employees recommended, ordered, or facilitated the transfer.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Atkins filed a verified complaint under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 alleging that Tennessee Department of Correction officials transferred him in retaliation for filing and prevailing in two lawsuits. He also filed a motion to ascertain the status of the case. The district court granted that motion insofar as it conducted the required PLRA screening, allowed the First Amendment retaliation claims to proceed, and dismissed the official-capacity claims for money damages on sovereign-immunity grounds.
