

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SECOND CIRCUIT

Hamilton v. Mark IV Industries, Inc.

321 F.3d 292 · Decided September 14, 2015

SUMMARY

The Second Circuit affirmed summary judgment for the defendants in Gertrude Coretta Fennell Hamilton’s action concerning her prior employment with Dayco Incorporated and Dayco’s New York bankruptcy proceedings. The court also upheld a filing injunction barring Hamilton from bringing further related lawsuits in the Southern District of New York, concluding that she received notice and an opportunity to be heard and that the injunction was not an abuse of discretion.

PRACTICE AREAS

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the district court properly granted summary judgment to the defendants based on the record and applicable res judicata and collateral estoppel principles.
2. Whether the district court abused its discretion by enjoining Hamilton from filing further lawsuits concerning her employment with Dayco or Dayco's bankruptcy proceedings.

HOLDINGS

1. The district court properly granted summary judgment to the defendants.
2. The district court did not abuse its discretion by enjoining Hamilton from filing further lawsuits relating to her employment with Dayco or to Dayco's bankruptcy proceedings.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“nothing “short of a filing injunction will protect the courts and other parties given that several judges have detailed precisely why [Hamilton’s] claims are barred, meritless, or otherwise unavailing.”” (712)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Hamilton repeatedly asserted claims arising from her employment with Dayco Incorporated and from Dayco's New York bankruptcy proceedings in multiple actions and venues. The district court determined that her claims were barred, meritless, or otherwise unavailing and entered a filing injunction after providing notice and an opportunity to be heard.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Southern District of New York granted summary judgment for the defendants and enjoined Hamilton from filing further related lawsuits. The district court issued its order on October 31, 2014. The Second Circuit affirmed, concluding that summary judgment was proper and that the filing injunction was not an abuse of discretion.

DISPOSITION

affirmed
