

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA

Jullian Huffman v. Dr. Amit Shah, et al.

Huffman · No. 7:25CV00839 · Decided November 26, 2025

SUMMARY

The United States District Court for the Western District of Virginia dismissed Jullian Huffman’s 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action without prejudice under the Prison Litigation Reform Act’s three-strikes provision, 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g). The court held that Huffman had not alleged facts showing imminent danger of serious physical injury and denied his motion for issuance of a subpoena as moot.

CASE DETAILS

COURT	United States District Court for the Western District of Virginia
WRITING FOR THE COURT	James P. Jones
JURISDICTION	United States District Court for the Western District of Virginia
DECIDED	November 26, 2025
DOCKET	7:25CV00839
DISPOSITION	dismissed
PROCEDURAL POSTURE	Plaintiff filed a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 civil rights action without prepaying the filing and administrative fees and implicitly sought leave to proceed in forma pauperis. The court considered the application under the Prison Litigation Reform Act’s three-strikes provision and also considered plaintiff’s motion for issuance of a subpoena.
STANDARD OF REVIEW	The court reviewed plaintiff’s eligibility to proceed in forma pauperis under 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g), requiring a narrow construction of the imminent-danger exception and accepting only allegations showing a real and proximate threat of serious physical injury.

Prison Litigation Reform Act

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether Huffman qualified to proceed in forma pauperis under the imminent-danger exception to 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g) despite having three or more prior qualifying dismissals.
2. Whether the complaint should be dismissed without prejudice for failure to prepay the filing and administrative fees.
3. Whether Huffman's motion for issuance of a subpoena should be denied as moot after dismissal of the action.

HOLDINGS

1. A prisoner with three or more prior actions or appeals dismissed as frivolous, malicious, or for failure to state a claim may proceed in forma pauperis only by alleging facts showing that he faced an imminent danger of serious physical injury when he filed the complaint. Huffman's conclusory allegation that defendants failed to prescribe desired medication did not satisfy that requirement.
2. Because Huffman was ineligible to proceed in forma pauperis and had not prepaid the required filing and administrative fees, the complaint was dismissed without prejudice.
3. Huffman's motion for issuance of a subpoena was denied as moot following dismissal of the complaint.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“The “imminent danger” exception to § 1915(g)’s “three strikes” rule must be construed narrowly and applied only “for genuine emergencies,” where “a threat . . . is real and proximate” to the alleged official misconduct.”

“Huffman has failed to establish that he is facing any imminent danger of physical injury because he has not pled any facts demonstrating a real or proximate threat of harm.”

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Huffman, a Virginia inmate, alleged that defendants failed to prescribe Wellbutrin for depression and substance abuse involving methamphetamine and nicotine, and asserted that Wellbutrin combined with Lexapro was the best treatment. He did not identify any specific imminent serious physical injury resulting from the failure to prescribe the requested medication. The court noted that Huffman had filed more than sixty lawsuits in the district, many dismissed as frivolous, malicious, or for failure to state a claim.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Huffman, a Virginia inmate proceeding pro se, filed a civil rights complaint alleging that defendants failed to prescribe Wellbutrin and Lexapro. He did not prepay the required fees and sought to proceed in forma pauperis. The district court found that he had accumulated more than three qualifying frivolous or otherwise dismissible actions and had not shown imminent danger of serious physical injury, dismissed the complaint without prejudice under 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g), and denied the subpoena motion as moot.
