

SUPREME COURT OF ALABAMA

State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Baggett

108 So. 3d 1008 (Ala. 2012) · Decided September 21, 2012

SUMMARY

The Alabama Supreme Court held that State Farm was entitled to reimbursement of a $25,000 overpayment made to an insured after an automobile-accident judgment. The court rejected application of the common-fund doctrine to the overpaid amount and remanded with instructions to order reimbursement without deducting an attorney fee from that amount.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether State Farm was entitled to reimbursement of the $25,000 it inadvertently paid in excess of its UIM policy limit.

2. Whether any attorney fee under the common-fund doctrine should be deducted from State Farm's $25,000 overpayment before reimbursement.

HOLDINGS

1. An insurer that inadvertently pays $25,000 in excess of its policy limits is entitled to reimbursement of the excess amount.
2. Any attorney fee due with respect to the $85,000 collectively owed by Sagamore and State Farm must be taken from that $85,000, not from the $25,000 overpayment that State Farm is entitled to recover.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“This Court, however, has determined that this case is simply one in which an insurer inadvertently paid $25,000 in excess of its policy limits, and the insurer is entitled to a refund of that excess amount.” (1009)

“If an attorney fee was due Baggett’s attorney with respect to all or part of the $85,000 actually owed in the aggregate by Sagamore and State Farm, then the fee should be taken from the $85,000, not from the $25,000 State Farm overpaid and as to which it is entitled to be reimbursed.” (1009)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Charles Baggett was injured in a 2005 automobile accident involving Diana Morris, whose liability insurer, Sagamore, had a $25,000 policy limit. Baggett's UIM insurer, State Farm, advanced him $25,000 to protect its potential subrogation interest and later opted out of the action. After Baggett obtained a $181,046 judgment against Morris, Sagamore paid $25,000, while State Farm mistakenly paid $60,000 instead of $35,000, resulting in a $25,000 overpayment.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

After Baggett obtained a jury judgment against Morris, Sagamore paid its $25,000 policy limit and State Farm mistakenly paid $60,000 rather than the $35,000 remaining under its $60,000 UIM limit after crediting its $25,000 advancement. The trial court ordered Baggett to reimburse State Farm $25,000 less a one-third attorney fee under the common-fund doctrine. The Court of Civil Appeals affirmed without opinion, and the Alabama Supreme Court reversed and remanded.

REMAND INSTRUCTIONS

The Court of Civil Appeals was instructed to remand the case to the trial court, which was instructed to order Baggett to reimburse State Farm $25,000.
