

NEW MEXICO COURT OF APPEALS

State of New Mexico v. Nicholas Schmidt a/k/a Nicholas Andrew Schmidt

No. A-1-CA-41744 (N.M. Ct. App. Mar. 31, 2026) · No. A-1-CA-41744 · Decided March 31, 2026

SUMMARY

The New Mexico Court of Appeals considers whether the spousal privilege protects communications between spouses concerning the abuse of a foster child. The court holds that a foster child in the care of one or both spouses is “a child of either” under Rule 11-505(D)(1)(a) NMRA, triggering the exception to the privilege. The court reverses and remands the district court’s exclusion of the communications.

Francolini, Assistant Solicitor General 16 Albuquerque, NM 17 for Appellant 18 Bennett Baur, Chief Public Defender 19 Santa Fe, NM 20 Steven J. Forsberg, Assistant Appellate Defender 21 Albuquerque, NM 22 for Appellee 1 OPINION 2 WRAY, Judge.

3 {1} In this appeal, we consider whether the spousal privilege applies to protect 4 communications between spouses regarding the abuse of a foster child. Rule 11- 5 505(B) NMRA affords spouses “a privilege to refuse to disclose, or to prevent 6 another from disclosing, a confidential communication by the person to that person’s 7 spouse while they were married.” The privilege does not apply in “proceedings in 8 which one spouse is charged with a crime against... a child of either.” Rule 11- 9 505(D)(1)(a).

In the present case, the district court did not apply the Rule 11- 10 505(D)(1)(a) exception and excluded statements made between Defendant and his 11 spouse regarding the abuse of a foster child in their care. Because we conclude that 12 a child who is entrusted by the state to the care of foster parents is “a child of either” 13 spouse, we reverse. 14 BACKGROUND 15 {2} Defendant and his spouse were licensed foster parents to B.B., who was two 16 years old when he came into their care.

Extensive, “head to toe” injuries were 17 discovered during a medical exam of B.B., and he was removed from the couple’s 18 care. The investigation that followed revealed text messages between Defendant and 19 his spouse that discussed the abuse of B.B. 1 {3} Defendant and his spouse were charged with child abuse and failure to report 2 child abuse or neglect.

The State filed a motion that sought a ruling from the district 3 court about whether the spousal privilege would apply to the text messages or if the 4 Rule 11-505(D)(1)(a) exception would permit the admission of the evidence.

After 5 a hearing, the district court ruled that the spousal privilege applied, because the State 6 had not demonstrated a “significant indicia of a—parental kind of relationship 7 status.” The State appeals. 8 DISCUSSION 9 {4} We generally “review a district court’s evidentiary rulings for an abuse of 10 discretion.” State v. Duran, 2015-NMCA-015, ¶ 11, 343 P.3d 207.

The State argues 11 that our review should be de novo, because the district court misinterpreted Rule 11- 12 505(D)(1)(a) and the spousal privilege does not shield communications between 13 foster parents about the abuse of a foster child. Defendant maintains that the district 14 court did not categorically reject the application of Rule 11-505(D)(1)(a), but instead 15 determined that the State did not prove “the requisite parental relationship” in the 16 present case.

For this reason, Defendant contends that we need not construe the 17 language of the privilege but only the district court’s “specific application of the rule 18 in this instance.” In order to consider the State’s arguments on appeal, we must 19 evaluate the application of the law to the facts and “give effect to the purpose and 20 intent of our Supreme Court” in promulgating Rule 11-505(D) (1)(a).

See State v. 1 Lucero, 2023-NMCA-035, ¶ 18, 528 P.3d 762. Our review is therefore de novo. See 2 Allen v. LeMaster, 2012-NMSC-001, ¶ 11, 267 P.3d 806 (reviewing de novo 3 decisions involving the “construction of the law of privileges” (internal quotation 4 marks and citation omitted)); State v. Oppenheimer & Co., 2019-NMCA-045, ¶ 6, 5 447 P.3d 1159 (“Even when we review for an abuse of discretion, our review of the 6 application of the law to the facts is conducted de novo.” (alteration, internal 7 quotation marks, and citation omitted)).

8 {5} When reviewing a rule, we apply “the same rules of construction applicable 9 to the interpretation of statutes.” State v. Lopez, 2023-NMSC-011, ¶ 10, 529 P.3d 10 893 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

To interpret a statute, we look 11 to the language of the statute, “its history and background and how the specific 12 statute fits within the broader statutory scheme.” Chaterjee v. King, 2012-NMSC- 13 019, ¶ 12, 280 P.3d 283. Applying these principles to our review of Rule 11- 14 505(D)(1)(a), we consider the language of the spousal privilege exception according 15 to its history and background as well as how the exception fits within the rules of 16 privilege.

See State v. Evans, 2023-NMCA-004, ¶ 7, 521 P.3d 1257 (considering the 17 language of the rule, and if the rule is ambiguous, “its purpose in conjunction with 18 other rules” in order to “seek guidance from the rule’s language, history, and 19 background.”); State v. Tarver, 2005-NMCA-030, ¶ 9, 137 N.M. 115, 108 P.3d 1 1 (“When statutes are related by subject matter, we read them together and construe 2 them as a harmonious whole.”).

3 {6} Considering first the language of Rule 11-505(D)(1)(a), we conclude that the 4 phrase “a child of either” is ambiguous. A rule is ambiguous “when it can be 5 understood by reasonably well-informed persons in two or more different senses.” 6 In re Gabriel M., 2002-NMCA-047, ¶ 12, 132 N.M. 124, 45 P.3d 64 (internal 7 quotation marks and citation omitted).

Rule 11-505(D)(1)(a) refers to “a child of 8 either” spouse who would claim the privilege, which could reasonably be understood 9 narrowly to refer only to a biological child or more broadly to encompass at least 10 some or all of the following: an adopted child, a stepchild, a child over whom the 11 spouse has some other legal authority, a child whose care has been entrusted to the 12 spouse, and a child who is simply viewed or treated as a child of either.

See State v. 13 Howell, 1979-NMCA-069, ¶¶ 4, 7, 93 N.M. 64, 596 P.2d 277 (considering but not 14 deciding whether the spousal privilege applied if the child was an adopted child or a 15 stepchild of the spouse or where the spouse “intended to assume the status of parent 16 to the child”); State v. Michels, 414 N.W.2d 311, 315 (Wis. Ct. App. 1987) 17 (concluding that a similar statute was ambiguous because “reasonable persons could 18 construe the ‘child of either’ exception [to the spousal privilege], to mean a child 19 with a biological or legal relationship to the parent on the one hand, or any child 20 living in a family-type setting on the other”).

Given these reasonable, differing 1 understandings of the language “a child of either,” we turn to the history and 2 background of the spousal privilege exception for guidance in resolving the 3 ambiguity. See Evans, 2023-NMCA-004, ¶ 7. 4 {7} New Mexico law reveals little by way of history and background for Rule 11- 5 505(D)(1)(a), but other jurisdictions with similar rules have shed some light on the 6 purpose of this particular exception to the spousal privilege.

Some jurisdictions 7 indicate that the exception was enacted for the broad purpose of preventing “child 8 abuse.” See Daniels v. State, 681 P.2d 341, 345 (Alaska Ct. App. 1984); see also 9 State v. Sewell, 205 A.3d 966, 979-80 (Md. 2019) (concluding that mandatory 10 reporting requirements eliminated a spouse's expectation of privacy in 11 communications regarding child abuse); United States v. Bahe, 128 F.3d 1440, 1446 12 (10th Cir.

1997) (recognizing a common law exception to the federal spousal 13 privilege for "testimony relating to the abuse of a minor child within the household" 14 because "[c]hild abuse is a horrendous crime"). Other jurisdictions have more 15 narrowly determined that the exception is intended "to protect society from crimes 16 against family members." Dunn v. Superior Court, 21 Cal.App.4th 721, 724 (Ct.

17 App. 1993); Michels, 414 N.W.2d at 316 ("The 'child of either' exception was 18 created to permit prosecution for crimes committed within the family unit."). In any 19 event, courts often evaluate whether the purpose of the underlying spousal privilege 20 is served in the context of allegations of child abuse by a spouse. See Commonwealth v. Hunter, 60 A.3d 156, 159 (Pa.

Super. Ct. 2013) ("Practically, it is important that 2 courts recognize that excluding information may not always further the intended 3 goal of a privilege and may, in fact, hinder the prosecution of legal proceedings 4 intended to protect fragile members of society."); Dunn, 21 Cal.App.4th at 723-24 5 ("The exemption is grounded on the self-evident premise that marital harmony 6 would be nonexistent in criminal actions where a child of either spouse is the victim 7 of a crime committed by one of the spouses." (alteration, internal quotation marks, 8 and citation omitted)); Daniels, 681 P.2d at 345 (explaining that the spousal- 9 privilege policy to further marital harmony "must yield to the policy of preventing 10 child abuse"); Merritt v. State, 339 So.

2d 1366, 1370 (Miss. 1976) ("A crime of 11 personal violence against the child is a crime that destroys the conjugal relation and 12 in essence is a controversy between husband and wife within the meaning of our 13 statute.").

In these jurisdictions, the goal of the spousal privilege is generally not 14 served by excluding testimony related to child abuse. 15 {8} We take our cue from these jurisdictions. The spousal privilege in New 16 Mexico has been described in many ways, but the privilege essentially protects the 17 marital relationship and prevents unwarranted invasions of privacy.

See State v. Gutierrez, 2021-NMSC-008, ¶¶ 15-20, 482 P.3d 700. 1 Importantly, our Supreme 1 In Gutierrez, our Supreme Court examined the continued viability of the spousal privilege, id. ¶¶ 21-37, and requested that the relevant Supreme Court rules committee consider "whether Rule 11-505 should be amended or abolished or 1 Court has also observed that privileges interfere "with the truth-seeking process of 2 litigation" and that "'exceptions to the demand for every [person's] evidence are not 3 lightly created nor expansively construed.'" Albuquerque Rape Crisis Cntr. v. 4 Blackmer, 2005-NMSC-032, ¶¶ 18-19, 138 N.M.

398, 120 P.3d 820 (quoting United States v. Nixon, 418 U.S. 683, 710 (1974)). Based on these principles, we conclude 6 that our Supreme Court intended for the exception as set forth Rule 11-

505(D)(1)(a) 7 to elevate the “truth-seeking process” during certain child-abuse prosecutions over 8 protecting the personal relationships and the privacy rights of married adults.

See 9 Blackmer, 2005-NMSC-032, ¶ 18. With some understanding of intent and purpose 10 in hand, we return to the original question: To which children does the language of 11 Rule 11-505(D)(1)(a) apply? 12 {9} We conclude that Rule 11-505(D)(1)(a) does not limit its reach to only 13 biological children.

In many contexts, New Mexico law permits the full legal 14 extension of the parent-child relationship to nonbiological children. See, e.g., NMSA 1978, § 32A-5-2(A) (1993) (providing that the purpose of the adoption statutes is to 16 “establish procedures to effect a legal relationship between a parent and adopted 17 child that is identical to that of a parent and biological child”); NMSA 1978, § 40- 18 11A-201 (2009) (providing for multiple ways to establish a parental relationship). should remain unchanged.” Gutierrez, 2021-NMSC-008, ¶ 111.

The relevant rules committee has not yet addressed the issue. See Rule 11-505 comm. cmt. 1 In other contexts, a nonbiological parent-child relationship may be partial or 2 temporary. See, e.g., NMSA 1978, § 32A-4-31(A) (2005) (defining the rights of a 3 permanent guardian); NMSA 1978, § 40-10B-13(A) (2001) (defining the rights and 4 duties of a kinship guardian as “the legal rights and duties of a parent except the right 5 to consent to adoption of the child and except for parental rights and duties that the 6 court orders retained by a parent”).

As we have noted, this Court has suggested that 7 Rule 11-505(D)(1)(a) applies to these types of legal, nonbiological parent-child 8 relationships. See Howell, 1979-NMCA-069, ¶¶ 4, 7. 9 {10} With this in mind, we see no reason why a foster child would not also be “a 10 child of either” married foster parent for the purposes of Rule 11-505(D)(1)(a).

We 11 therefore hold—consistent with the persuasive holdings of courts in other 12 jurisdictions—that the exception in Rule 11-501(D)(1)(a) applies to a child in the 13 foster care of one or both spouses. See Daniels, 681 P.2d at 345 (“We believe that a 14 foster child..., who is placed by the state and accepted by the foster parents in a 15 foster home, should be entitled to the same protection as a natural or adopted 16 child.”); Dunn, 21 Cal.App.4th at 724 (seeing “no reason to exclude foster children 17 from [the definition of ‘a child of... either’], as it is consistent with the general 18 legislative intent”); State v. Brydon, 626 S.W.2d 443, 452-53 (Mo.

Ct. App. 1981) 19 (explaining that “a crime against the child of the family is equivalent to a crime 1 against the spouse” and “[a] child committed to the protection of foster parents 2 logically comes within that ambit”). 3 {11} As Defendant notes, the district court did not rule to the contrary but instead 4 determined that as a factual matter, the State had not established that the particular 5 relationship here was sufficiently parental or that the relationship would be long 6 term.

We conclude that no such factual inquiry is necessary in this circumstance. A 7 “foster parent” is a person licensed by Children, Youth & Families Department 8 (CYFD) or a child placement agency “to provide care for children in the custody of” 9 CYFD or a child placement agency. See NMSA 1978, § 32A-1-4(K) (2025).2 By 10 this definition, a child is placed in the care of a licensed foster parent by CYFD or 11 any agency, which has taken custody of the child from the biological parents.

The 12 potentially temporary nature of that formal relationship does not suggest a reason 13 why a foster child is not “a child of either” married foster parent after they have been 14 entrusted with and have accepted the profound responsibility of providing for the 15 care of the child. 16 {12} In the present case, because the spouses shared a foster-parent relationship 17 with B.B., we need not consider whether a less formal relationship would qualify to 2 Section 32A-1-4 was amended in 2022, 2023, and 2025, after the alleged criminal behavior in the present case.

Apart from recompilation from Section 32A- 1-4(I) (2019) to Section 32A-1-4(K), those amendments do not impact our analysis. We therefore refer to the current statute. 1 trigger Rule 11-505(D)(1)(a)’s exception or the factual showing that would be 2 necessary under any such circumstances. See Fevig v. Fevig, 1977-NMSC-005, ¶ 7, 3 90 N.M. 51, 559 P.2d 839 (“A person is said to stand in loco parentis when [they] 4 put[] [themselves] in the situation of a lawful parent by assuming the obligations 5 incident to the parental relationship without going through the formalities necessary 6 to a legal adoption” and with the intent “to assume toward the child the status of a 7 parent.”).

Instead, we hold only that a foster child is “a child of either” spouse for 8 the purposes of Rule 11-505(D)(1)(a). 9 CONCLUSION 10 {13} We reverse and remand. 11 {14} IT IS SO ORDERED.
