QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether supervisory-writ relief should be granted when the relator fails to provide the portions of the district-court record necessary to evaluate his post-conviction claims.
2. Whether the relator may supplement the deficient writ application or seek rehearing to provide the omitted materials.

HOLDINGS

1. Supervisory-writ relief was denied because the relator failed to include the portions of the district-court record necessary to support and evaluate his post-conviction claims.
2. Supplementation of the writ application and an application for rehearing would not be considered; the relator could instead file a new application containing the complete required materials.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“Relator failed to include the application for postconviction relief, the State’s response, if any, the commissioner’s report, the trial court’s ruling, the transcript of the guilty plea, and any other portions of the district court record that might support the claims raised in the application for postconviction relief.”

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The relator sought review of post-conviction-relief proceedings. He did not include the post-conviction application, the State’s response, the commissioner’s report, the trial court’s ruling, the guilty-plea transcript, or other portions of the district-court record that might support his claims.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Grisby sought supervisory-writ review of proceedings involving applications for post-conviction relief in the district court. The First Circuit denied the writ because the application omitted essential portions of the district-court record needed to evaluate the claims. The court stated that supplementation of the writ application or an application for rehearing would not be considered, while permitting a new application to be filed by February 26, 2026, without obtaining a return date.
