CALIFORNIA

Daniel Castellanos Lopez v. Warden, Otay Mesa Detention Center, et al.

Castellanos Lopez v. Warden · No. 25-cv-2527-RSH-SBC · Decided October 27, 2025

SUMMARY

The United States District Court for the Southern District of California granted Daniel Castellanos Lopez’s 28 U.S.C. § 2241 petition challenging his immigration detention without a bond hearing. The Court held that 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) did not mandate his detention because he had lived in the United States for many years and was not seeking admission when apprehended. The Court ordered Respondents to arrange a bond hearing under 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a) within seven days, while denying immediate release and other relief.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g) or § 1252(b)(9) deprived the district court of jurisdiction over a habeas challenge to the legality of Petitioner's immigration detention.
2. Whether Petitioner was subject to mandatory detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) or instead was detained under the discretionary detention and bond framework of § 1226(a).
3. Whether Petitioner was entitled to a bond hearing before an immigration judge.

HOLDINGS

1. The jurisdictional bars in 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g) and § 1252(b)(9) did not bar the district court from hearing Petitioner's habeas challenge because he challenged the legality of his detention rather than a removal order, the decision to commence proceedings, or the process by which removability would be determined.
2. Petitioner was not subject to mandatory detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A); because he had long been present in the United States and was not actively seeking admission when arrested, his detention was governed by § 1226(a).
3. Petitioner was entitled to a bond hearing before an immigration judge under 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a).

KEY QUOTATIONS

“The Court concludes that Petitioner is not subject to mandatory detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), and that detention, bond, and release in Petitioner’s case are instead governed by 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a).” (at 5)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Daniel Castellanos Lopez, a citizen of Mexico, entered the United States in or around 2003 without a valid visa and remained in the country for more than twenty years. His U.S.-citizen wife filed an I-130 petition for him in 2018, and the petition was approved. ICE arrested him at his San Diego residence on August 21, 2025, charged him as removable, and detained him at Otay Mesa without providing a bond hearing; the record did not indicate that he was apprehended upon entry, within two years of entry, actively seeking admission, or involved in an enumerated criminal offense.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner filed a § 2241 petition on September 25, 2025, challenging his detention by ICE without a bond hearing. Respondents opposed the petition, and Petitioner filed a traverse. The district court held that the jurisdictional bars in 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g) and (b)(9) did not apply, concluded that detention was governed by § 1226(a) rather than the mandatory-detention provision in § 1225(b)(2)(A), and granted the petition to the extent of ordering a bond hearing.

REMAND INSTRUCTIONS

Respondents must arrange a bond hearing for Petitioner before an immigration court pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a) within seven days of the order. The request for immediate release was denied.

OPINION

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT 9 SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA 10 11 Daniel Castellanos Lopez, Case No.: 25-cv-2527-RSH-SBC 12 Petitioner,
ORDER GRANTING PETITION 13 v. FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS 14 Warden, Otay
Mesa Detention Center, et al., 15 Respondents. 16 17 18 19 20 Petitioner Daniel Castellanos
Lopez seeks habeas relief from this Court pursuant to 21 28 U.S.C. § 2241.

ECF No. 1. Petitioner, a citizen of Mexico, is detained by U.S. Customs 22 and Immigration Enforcement (“ICE”) at the Otay Mesa Detention Center in San Diego, 23 California. Id. ¶¶ 3, 4.
As set forth below, the Court grants the Petition. 24 I. BACKGROUND 25 On September 25,
2025, Petitioner initiated this action by filing a petition for writ 26 of habeas corpus pursuant to 28
U.S.C. § 2241, challenging the lawfulness of his detention.

27 ECF No. 1. Petitioner names as respondents the warden of the detention center, the Director 28 of ICE’s San Diego Field Office for Enforcement and Removal Operations, and the U.S. 1

Attorney General. 2 Petitioner alleges that he last arrived in the United States in or around 2003, and has 3 remained in the United States during that time. Id. ¶ 8. At the time he arrived, he lacked a 4 valid visa.

Id. 5 Petitioner's wife is a U.S. citizen. Id. ¶ 10. On January 22, 2018, she filed a Form I- 6 130, Petition for Alien Relative, on behalf of Petitioner. Id. ¶ 12. That petition was 7 approved on December 14, 2018. Id. 8 On August 21, 2025, Petitioner was detained by ICE officers at his residence in San 9 Diego, California. Id. ¶ 13. He was charged the same day in a Notice to Appear with being 10 a noncitizen subject to removal.

ECF No. 5-1 at 9. 11 Petitioner has been held at the Otay Mesa Detention Center since the date of his 12 arrest. ECF No. 1 ¶ 13. He has not been provided a bond hearing. Id. ¶ 15. 13 The Petition alleges that Petitioner is entitled to a bond hearing pursuant to 8 U.S.C. 14 § 1226(a) and its associated regulations. See 8 C.F.R. §§ 236.1(d), 1236.1, 1003.19(a)-(f).

15 The Petition seeks release from detention and/or a bond hearing before an immigration 16 judge. 17 Respondents have filed an opposition. ECF No. 5. Petitioner has filed a traverse. 18 ECF No. 7. 19 II. LEGAL STANDARD 20 Title 28 of the U.S. Code, Section 2241, provides that “[w]rits of habeas corpus may 21 be granted by the Supreme Court, any justice thereof, the district courts and any circuit 22 judge within their respective jurisdictions.” 28 U.S.C. § 2241(a).

A detainee bears the 23 burden of demonstrating that “[h]e is in custody in violation of the Constitution or laws or 24 treaties of the United States.” 28 U.S.C. § 2241(c)(3). 25 III. ANALYSIS 26 A. Jurisdiction 27 Respondents contend that Petitioner's claim is jurisdictionally barred under 8 U.S.C. 28 § 1252(g) and (b)(9). ECF No. 5 at 1–5. 1 Section 1252(g) provides that, except as otherwise provided in that section, and 2 notwithstanding any other provision of law including 28 U.S.C. § 2241, “no court shall 3 have jurisdiction to hear any cause or claim by or on behalf of any alien arising from the 4 decision or action by the Attorney General to commence proceedings, adjudicate cases, or 5 execute removal orders against any alien under this chapter.” 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g).

6 Additionally, Section 1252(b)(9) states: 7 Judicial review of all questions of law and fact, including interpretation 8 and application of constitutional and statutory provisions, arising from any action taken or proceeding brought to remove an alien from the 9 United States under this subchapter shall be available only in judicial 10 review of a final order under this section.

11 8 U.S.C. § 1252(b)(9). Respondents argue that “Petitioner challenges the government's 12 decision and action to detain him, which arises from DHS's decision to commence removal 13 proceedings,” and is thus barred by both Section 1252(g) and (b)(9). ECF No. 5 at 4. 14 The Supreme Court has interpreted the “arising from” jurisdiction-limiting provision 15 in 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g) provisions narrowly, restricting it “only to three discrete actions that 16 the Attorney General may take”: the “‘decision or action’ to ‘commence proceedings, 17 adjudicate cases, or execute removal orders.’” Reno v. Am.-Arab Anti-Discrimination 18 Comm., 525 U.S. 471, 482 (1999) (emphasis in original) (quoting 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g)).

The 19 Supreme Court noted that “[t]here are of course many other decisions or actions that may 20 be part of the deportation process....” Id. 21 In a later decision involving a habeas petition, the Supreme Court likewise narrowly 22 interpreted the similar “arising from” language in 8 U.S.C. § 1252(b)(9). Jennings v. 23 Rodriguez, 583 U.S. 281, 294 (2018).

Referring back to its opinion in American-Arab Anti- 24 Discrimination Committee, the Supreme Court explained that it did not construe Section 25 1252(g) “to sweep in any claim that can technically be said to ‘arise from’ the three listed 26 actions of the Attorney General. Instead, we read the language to refer to just those three 27 specific actions themselves.” Jennings v. Rodriguez, 583 U.S. 281, 294 (2018) (citation 28 omitted).

Consistent with this narrow interpretation, the Supreme Court held that Section 1 1252(b)(9) did not bar the detainee in Jennings from using habeas to challenge the legality 2 of his detention. Id. at 294–95 (“[I]t is enough to note that respondents are not asking for 3 review of an order of removal; they are not challenging the decision to detain them in the 4 first place or to seek removal; and they are not even challenging any part of the process by 5 which their removability will be determined.

Under these circumstances, § 1252(b)(9) does 6 not present a jurisdictional bar.”). See also Flores-Miramontes v. INS, 212 F.3d 1133, 1139 7 (9th Cir. 2000) (stating that § 1252(b)(9) “does not affect petitions for habeas corpus”). 8 Here, Petitioner challenges the legality of his detention rather than challenging an 9 order of removal or Respondents’ decision to charge him with being a removable 10 noncitizen.

Based on the foregoing precedent, the Court concludes that Petitioner’s claim 11 is not barred by 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g) or (b)(9). 12 B. Merits 13 Petitioner alleges that he is entitled to a bond determination under 8 U.S.C. § 14 1226(a), which provides that, except for noncitizens with certain criminal convictions as 15 set forth in subsection (c), the Attorney General may release an alien on bond or conditional 16 parole pending a decision on whether the alien is to be removed from the United States.

17 ECF No. 1 ¶ 20. Petitioner asserts that he is not subject to the mandatory detention 18 provisions contained in the expedited removal statute, 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b). The Petition 19 alleges, “Section [] 1225(b)(1) is limited to presently ‘arriving’ noncitizens and those 20 apprehended within two years of entry, and [Section] 1225(b)(2) is limited to those in the 21 process of ‘seeking admission.’” ECF No. 1 ¶ 20.

Petitioner falls into neither category. 22 Respondents maintain that Petitioner is not entitled to a bond hearing. They do not 23 dispute Petitioner’s proffered facts—that he was not detained upon arrival, that he was not 24 apprehended within two years of entry, and that he was not actively seeking admission at 25 the time he was arrested or charged. Nonetheless, Respondents assert in their return that 26 Petitioner is subject to mandatory detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A).

ECF No. 5 at 27 6. That statute provides that subject to certain exceptions, “in the case of an alien who is 28 an applicant for admission, if the examining immigration officer determines that an alien 1 seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted, the alien shall 2 be detained for a proceeding under section 1229a of this title.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A).

3 An “applicant for admission” for purposes of this section includes an “alien present in the 4 United States who has not been admitted....” Id. § 1225(a)(1). Respondents argue that 5 Petitioner is an alien present in the United States who has not been admitted, and therefore 6 that under the plain language of the statute he is an “applicant for admission” subject to the 7 mandatory detention provision of Section 1225(b)(2)(A), even if he is not applying for 8 anything in an everyday sense of the word.

ECF No. 5 at 6. 9 Assuming that this analysis is correct, the plain language of the mandatory detention 10 provision on which Respondents rely also requires that the “applicant for admission” be 11 “seeking admission.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225.

The Petition asserts that Petitioner was not in the 12 process of “seeking admission” at the time he was apprehended and charged. ECF No. 1 ¶ 13 20. Respondents appear to answer that all applicants for admission are, by definition, also 14 “seeking admission.” ECF No. 5 at 8–9. Respondents do not cite any cases that so hold. 15 Respondents’ interpretation of “seeking admission” as used in the mandatory 16 detention provision of Section 1225(b)(2)(A) would seemingly render that phrase mere 17 surplusage, such that the language could be deleted while retaining the same statutory 18 meaning: “[I]n the case of an alien who is an applicant for admission, if the examining 19 immigration officer determines that an alien seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a 20 doubt entitled to be admitted, the alien shall be detained” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) 21 (emphasis added).

Respondents argue elsewhere that “[o]ne of the most basic interpretative 22 canon instructs that a statute should be construed so that effect is given to all its provisions,” 23 and a construction must avoid rendering statutory language “superfluous, void or 24 insignificant.” ECF No. 5 at 8 (citing Corley v. United States, 556 U.S. 303, 314 (2009)). 25 Respondents’ approach to the mandatory detention provision at issue appears to run 26 contrary to this interpretive canon.

27 Respondents’ interpretation also appears to collapse the general distinction between 28 Section 1225(b) and Section 1226(a) explained by the Supreme Court in Jennings. In that 1 case, the Supreme Court observed that “U.S. immigration law authorizes the government 2 to detain certain aliens seeking admission into the country under §§ 1225(b)(1) and (b)(2).

3 It also authorizes the Government to detain certain aliens already in the country pending 4 the outcome of removal proceedings under §§ 1226(a) and (c).” 583 U.S. at 289. The Court 5 thereby contrasted “aliens seeking admission into the country” (to whom Section 1225(b) 6 applies) with “aliens already in the country” (to whom Section 1226 applies). Id. The 7 Supreme Court described Section 1226(a) as the “default rule” for “the process of arresting 8 and detaining” aliens who are already “inside the United States.” Id. at 288.

See also id. at 9 303 (“§ 1226 applies to aliens already present in the United States. Section 1226(a) creates 10 a default rule for those aliens by permitting—but not requiring—the Attorney General to 11 issue warrants for their arrest and detention pending removal proceedings.”).

Here, it would 12 be more accurate to describe Petitioner as “already in the country” or “already present in 13 the United States” rather than as “seeking admission into the country”—Petitioner has been 14 in the United States continuously for over 20 years and was not actively seeking admission 15 at the time he was arrested and charged with removability.

Although the Court recognizes 16 that there are situations where a nonimmigrant already present in the United States may be 17 nonetheless subject to mandatory detention under other provisions of Section 1225(b) not 18 discussed herein, Petitioner’s argument that he is subject to Section 1226(a) as a “default 19 rule” is thus consistent with the Supreme Court’s discussion in Jennings.

20 Section 1226(a) itself provides an exception (“[e]xcept as provided in subsection 21 (c)”) to its rule that the Attorney General may set bond or release an alien on conditional 22 parole. Section 1226(c), in turn, provides for the mandatory detention of noncitizens who 23 have committed certain crimes. Relevant here, Section 1226(c) states that “[t]he Attorney 24 General shall take into custody any alien who ... is inadmissible under paragraph (6)(A) 25 ... of section 1182(a) of this title, and is charged with, is arrested for, is convicted of, 26 admits having committed, or admits committing acts which constitute the essential 27 elements of any burglary, theft, larceny, shoplifting, or assault of a law enforcement officer 28 offense, or any crime that results in death or serious bodily injury to another person....” 1 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c)(1)(E) (emphasis added).

Petitioner appears to satisfy the first of these 2 two statutory conditions for mandatory detention: He is “[a]n alien present in the United 3 States without having been admitted or paroled,” which is a ground for inadmissibility 4 under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6).

However, Petitioner does not satisfy the second of these two 5 statutory conditions—there is no hint that he has been arrested for or committed an 6 enumerated crime. The point is not that Respondents are relying on the mandatory 7 detention provision contained in Section 1226(c)— they are not. But Respondents' 8 interpretation of Section 1225(b)(2)(A) would seemingly render the foregoing language 9 from Section 1226(c) a nullity.

That is, under Respondents' interpretation, all aliens 10 "present in the United States without being admitted or paroled" are applicants for 11 admission who are seeking admission, and are subject to mandatory detention under 12 Section 1225(b)(2)(A). There would be no reason for Congress to further specify that some 13 subset of those noncitizens, who have committed certain enumerated crimes, are subject to 14 mandatory detention under Section 1226(c)(1)(E).

15 The overwhelming majority of courts to address the issue have agreed that Section 16 1226(a), rather than the mandatory detention provision of Section 1225(b)(2)(A), applies 17 to a noncitizen in Petitioner's position who has resided in the United States for many years. 18 See, e.g., Contreras-Cervantes v. Raycraft, No. 2:25-cv-13073, 2025 WL 2952796, at *8 19 & n.4 (E.D.

Mich. Oct. 17, 2025) ("There can be no genuine dispute that Section 1226(a), 20 and not Section 1225(b)(2)(A), applies to a noncitizen who has resided in this country, 21 irrespective of the length of time, having been apprehended and arrested within the border 22 of the United States.

The reading of the statutes supports this finding, as does every other 23 Court that has had to address the distinction between Section 1225(b)(2)(A) and Section 24 1226(a).") (collecting cases); Cerritos Echevarria v. Bondi, No. CV-25-3252-PHX-DWL 25 (ESW), 2025 WL 2821282, at *4 (D. Ariz. Oct. 3, 2025) ("In recent months, many district 26 courts across the country have grappled with the same issue, and it appears that all but one 27 of them has rejected Respondents' position and concluded that an alien in Petitioner's 28 situation (i.e., an alien who entered the United States without inspection, never formally | ||} applied for admission, and has been living in the United States for years or decades) is 2 || entitled to a bond hearing under § 1226(a).") (collecting cases).!

This Court rules likewise. 3 The Court concludes that Petitioner is not subject to mandatory detention under 8 4 |1U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), and that detention, bond, and release in Petitioner's case are 5 instead governed by 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a). 6 CONCLUSION 7 For the foregoing reasons, the Petition is GRANTED. Respondents are directed to 8 || arrange a bond hearing for Petitioner before an immigration court pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 9 || 1226(a) within seven (7) days of this order as described above.

All other relief sought in 10 |the Petition, including an order directing Petitioner's immediate release, is denied. The 11 ||Court VACATES the hearing date set for October 28, 2025. 12 IT IS SO ORDERED. 13 || Dated: October 27, 2025 14 fo ht C lw 15 Hon. Robert S. Huie United States District Judge 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 25 The district court in Cerritos Echevarria cited "one apparent exception," which is 6 the decision on which Respondents rely, *Chavez v.
