

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA COURT OF APPEALS

Newman v. United States

824 A.2d 40 (D.C. 2003) · Decided May 7, 2003

SUMMARY

The District of Columbia Court of Appeals granted rehearing in part and amended its prior opinion concerning the admissibility of evidence related to an earlier robbery under Winfield. The court clarified that such evidence should not be excluded based on jury confusion unless its relevance is marginal and its probative value is substantially outweighed by that concern, and it remanded for a new trial.

CASE DETAILS

COURT	District of Columbia Court of Appeals
WRITING FOR THE COURT	Farrell; Glickman; Reid; Ruiz; Schwelb; Steadman; Terry; Wagner; Washington
JURISDICTION	District of Columbia
DECIDED	May 7, 2003
DISPOSITION	reversed_and_remanded
PROCEDURAL POSTURE	The court considered the appellee's petition for rehearing or rehearing en banc concerning the court's prior opinion, reported at 810 A.2d 918 (D.C. 2002). The merits division granted rehearing to amend specified portions of that opinion and denied rehearing en banc as moot.
STANDARD OF REVIEW	Abuse of discretion for the trial court's evidentiary balancing and exclusion of the proffered Winfield evidence.
PRECEDENTIAL VALUE	Published and precedential
PARTIES	Newman v. United States

TOPICS

- evidence
- relevance
- appellate procedure
- criminal procedure

PRACTICE AREAS

- criminal procedure
- evidence
- appellate procedure

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the trial court improperly excluded the proffered evidence concerning the earlier robbery under Winfield.
2. Whether concerns about jury confusion and a trial-within-a-trial outweighed the probative value of otherwise admissible Winfield evidence.
3. Whether the court's prior opinion should be amended on rehearing.

HOLDINGS

1. The trial court abused its discretion by excluding any evidence of the earlier robbery because it undervalued the evidence's relevance and consequently overemphasized the risks of jury distraction and a trial-within-a-trial.
2. Evidence otherwise admissible under Winfield should not be excluded based on fear of jury confusion unless its relevance is marginal and its probative value is substantially outweighed by a reasoned fear of jury confusion.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“Because the trial court on remand undervalued the relevance of the proffered Winfield evidence, it accordingly overemphasized the risk of jury distraction and trial-within-a-trial that the evidence would create, matters Winfield held can normally be dealt with by ‘limit[at]ions on] the number of witnesses and the extent of their testimony bearing upon the issue.’” (41)

“For that reason, the court abused its discretion in excluding any evidence of the earlier robbery, and we must reverse and remand for a new trial.” (41)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The source is a rehearing order and does not set out the underlying factual record in detail. It indicates that the proffered evidence concerned an earlier robbery and was offered as Winfield evidence relevant to the defense. The trial court excluded the evidence based in part on concerns about jury confusion and the creation of a trial-within-a-trial.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The prior appellate opinion addressed the exclusion of evidence concerning an earlier robbery under Winfield. On rehearing, the court amended its reasoning and disposition, concluding that the trial court abused its discretion by excluding the evidence and that reversal and remand for a new trial were required. The petition for rehearing en banc was denied as moot, without prejudice to a new petition directed to the amended opinion.

DISPOSITION

reversed_and_remanded

REMAND INSTRUCTIONS

Reverse and remand for a new trial, with the trial court to permit the otherwise admissible evidence of the earlier robbery subject to appropriate evidentiary management consistent with Winfield.

CASES CITED

- Winfield, 676 A.2d at 5
- Johnson v. United States, 683 A.2d 1087, 1100 (D.C. 1996) (en banc)
- Newman v. United States, 810 A.2d 918 (D.C. 2002)

Retrieved from lawtools.ai · <https://lawtools.ai/cases/state/district-of-columbia-district-of-columbia-court-of-appeals/2003/newman-v-united-states-65wcql9a>