

SUPREME COURT OF APPEALS OF WEST VIRGINIA

In re T.S. & S.A.

In re T.S. & S.A. · No. 13-0304 · Decided October 1, 2013

SUMMARY

The Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia affirmed a circuit court order terminating the mother's parental rights to T.S. and S.A. The court held that the record supported the findings that a family case plan had been developed, the mother failed to follow through with rehabilitative services, and there was no reasonable likelihood that the conditions of abuse and neglect could be substantially corrected.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the circuit court erred in terminating Petitioner Mother's parental rights because the DHHR allegedly failed to establish a family case plan or determine the services necessary for reunification.
2. Whether the evidence was sufficient to establish that there was no reasonable likelihood that the conditions of abuse and neglect could be substantially corrected and that termination of parental rights was necessary for the children's welfare.

HOLDINGS

1. The failure of the parties to sign the family case plan did not warrant reversal because the record showed that a plan had been developed, filed, approved by the circuit court, and sufficiently identified the services and logical steps necessary to address the neglect conditions.
2. The circuit court properly terminated Petitioner Mother's parental rights because sufficient evidence established that there was no reasonable likelihood that the conditions of abuse and neglect could be substantially corrected in the near future and that termination was necessary for the children's welfare.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“The purpose of the family case plan . . . is to clearly set forth an organized, realistic method of identifying family problems and the logical steps to be used in resolving or lessening these problems.” (2)

“Although conclusions of law reached by a circuit court are subject to de novo review, when an action, such as an abuse and neglect case, is tried upon the facts without a jury, the circuit court shall make a determination based upon the evidence and shall make findings of fact and conclusions of law as to whether such child is abused or neglected.” (2)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The DHHR alleged ongoing domestic violence, illegal drug abuse, and failures by Petitioner Mother to provide the children with necessary food, clothing, supervision, and housing. S.A. was born with marijuana, benzodiazepine, and Lortab in her system. Although the circuit court ordered services including visitation, counseling, evaluations, and drug screening, Petitioner Mother did not follow the recommendations of her psychological evaluation, did not consistently attend parenting classes, and did not participate in or failed random drug screens.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The DHHR filed an abuse and neglect petition and sought temporary emergency custody in September 2011. The circuit court removed the children, ordered services, adjudicated the children neglected and Petitioner Mother an abusing parent, and terminated her parental rights by order entered March 13, 2013. The Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia reviewed the termination order and affirmed it by memorandum decision.

DISPOSITION
