

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE CENTRAL DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

Michael Reese v. JetBlue Airways Corporation

Reese v. JetBlue · No. 2:25-cv-00251-FLA (JPRx) · Decided March 28, 2025

SUMMARY

The United States District Court for the Central District of California orders the parties to show cause why the action should not be remanded for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction. The court questions whether the notice of removal establishes by a preponderance of the evidence that the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000 and directs the parties to respond in writing within fourteen days.

PRACTICE AREAS

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the Notice of Removal adequately established diversity subject matter jurisdiction by demonstrating that the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000.
2. Whether the parties should be ordered to show cause why the action should not be remanded for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.

HOLDINGS

1. The Notice of Removal did not presently demonstrate by a preponderance of the evidence that the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000, so the court required Defendant to provide further support for federal jurisdiction.
2. The court did not yet order remand; instead, it ordered the parties to show cause in writing within fourteen days why remand should not occur and warned that Defendant's failure to respond adequately would result in remand.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“Federal courts are courts of “limited jurisdiction,” possessing “only that power authorized by the Constitution and statute[.]”” (at 1)

“A complaint filed in federal court must contain “a plausible allegation that the amount in controversy exceeds the jurisdictional threshold.”” (at 2)

“Where a party contests, or the court questions, a party’s allegations concerning the amount in controversy, both sides shall submit proof, and the court must decide whether the party asserting jurisdiction has proven the amount in controversy by a preponderance of the evidence.” (at 2)

“The parties are ORDERED TO SHOW CAUSE, in writing only, within fourteen (14) days from the date of this Order, why this action should not be remanded for lack of subject matter jurisdiction because the amount in controversy does not exceed the jurisdictional threshold.” (at 3)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Defendant removed the action to federal court. The Notice of Removal asserted diversity jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a), but the court found that the allegations did not demonstrate by a preponderance of the evidence that the amount in controversy exceeded $75,000. The court therefore required the parties to submit written responses and supporting evidence concerning the facial and factual sufficiency of Defendant's jurisdictional showing.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The action was removed to the United States District Court for the Central District of California. The court reviewed the Notice of Removal and determined that it could not presently conclude that diversity jurisdiction existed because the amount-in-controversy allegations did not establish, by a preponderance of the evidence, that more than $75,000 was in controversy. The court ordered written responses within fourteen days and warned that Defendant's failure to respond timely and adequately would result in remand.

REMAND INSTRUCTIONS

The parties must submit written responses within fourteen days explaining why the action should not be remanded for failure to satisfy the amount-in-controversy requirement. Responses may include evidence and judicially noticeable facts and are limited to ten pages. Defendant's failure to respond timely and adequately will result in remand without further notice.
