

SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK, APPELLATE DIVISION, FIRST DEPARTMENT

People v. Sozio

2026 NY Slip Op 01611 (N.Y. Ct. App. 2026) · No. Case No. 2024-04374; Appeal No. 6163; Ind. No. 70510/23
· Decided March 19, 2026

SUMMARY

The New York Supreme Court, Appellate Division, First Department unanimously affirmed Gino Sozio's convictions for attempted first-degree assault as a hate crime, second-degree assault as a hate crime, and third-degree criminal possession of a weapon. The court upheld the sufficiency and weight of the evidence, denial of a justification charge, handling of the prosecutor's summation and jury note, and the aggregate nine-year sentence.

CASE DETAILS

COURT	Supreme Court of the State of New York, Appellate Division, First Department
WRITING FOR THE COURT	Moulton, J.P.; Friedman, J.; Gesmer, J.; O'Neill Levy, J.; Chan, J.
JURISDICTION	New York Supreme Court, Appellate Division, First Department
DECIDED	March 19, 2026
DOCKET	Case No. 2024-04374; Appeal No. 6163; Ind. No. 70510/23
DISPOSITION	affirmed
PROCEDURAL POSTURE	Defendant appealed from a judgment of Supreme Court, New York County, entered after a jury trial convicting him of attempted assault in the first degree as a hate crime, assault in the second degree as a hate crime, and criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree, and imposing an aggregate nine-year sentence.
STANDARD OF REVIEW	The court reviewed legal sufficiency and weight of the evidence, considered the justification-charge request in the light most favorable to defendant, applied preservation rules to the summation challenge, reviewed the unpreserved claim only for interest-of-justice relief, and assessed whether the trial court meaningfully responded to the jury note.
PRECEDENTIAL VALUE	published

PARTIES

Gino Sozio v. The People of the State of New York

TOPICS

criminal procedure

evidence

self defense

preservation of error

appellate procedure

PRACTICE AREAS

criminal law

criminal procedure

hate crimes

appellate litigation

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the convictions were supported by legally sufficient evidence and were not against the weight of the evidence.
2. Whether the evidence supported a justification charge.
3. Whether the prosecutor's summation deprived defendant of a fair trial, despite defendant's failure to preserve the challenge.
4. Whether the trial court meaningfully responded to the jury's request for a definition of substantial in connection with the hate-crime charges.
5. Whether the sentence should be reduced.

HOLDINGS

1. The convictions were supported by legally sufficient evidence and were not against the weight of the evidence.
2. The evidence established that defendant committed the specified assault at least in substantial part because of a belief or perception regarding the victim's race, color, national origin, ancestry, or religion.
3. The trial court properly denied defendant's request for a justification charge because no reasonable view of the evidence supported the charge.
4. Defendant's challenge to the prosecutor's summation was unpreserved and was not reviewed in the interest of justice; alternatively, the summation did not deprive defendant of a fair trial.
5. The trial court meaningfully responded to the jury's request for a definition of substantial by defining it as more than a little, or more than slight or trivial.

KEY QUOTATIONS

"The totality of the evidence regarding events before, during, and after the crime, including witness testimony and video footage, amply supports the jury's conclusion that defendant committed the specified assault at least "in substantial part because of a belief or perception regarding the race, color, national origin, ancestry . . . [or] religion" of the victim"

"Thus, the court's instruction defining "substantial" as "more than a little, or . . . more than slight or trivial" constituted a meaningful response to the jury's inquiry"

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Defendant engaged in a verbal altercation with young Muslim men near a halal cart, telling them to go back to their country and using racial and anti-Muslim epithets. He slashed one of the men with a knife and continued making racist and anti-Muslim remarks after the police arrived. The victim was unarmed, defendant was the first person to use deadly physical force, and no physical barriers prevented defendant from retreating in complete safety.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Supreme Court, New York County, rendered judgment on June 11, 2024. The Appellate Division unanimously affirmed, rejecting challenges to the sufficiency and weight of the evidence, denial of a justification charge, prosecutorial summation, the court's response to a jury note, and the sentence.

DISPOSITION

affirmed

CASES CITED

- People v. Lamont, 25 NY3d 315, 318-319 [2015]
- People v. Danielson, 9 NY3d 342, 348-349 [2007]
- People v. Baque, 43 NY3d 26 [2024]
- People v. Wallace, 113 AD3d 413, 414 [1st Dept 2014], affd 27 NY3d 1037 [2016]
- People v. Morales, 225 AD3d 549, 550 [1st Dept 2024], lv denied 41 NY3d 1020 [2024], cert denied, 145 S Ct 1088 [2025]
- People v. Winston, 205 AD3d 32, 41 [1st Dept 2022], quoting People v. Pirozzi, 237 AD2d 628, 630 [2d Dept 1997]
- People v. Brown, 33 NY3d 316, 320 [2019]
- People v. Francis, 15 AD3d 318 [1st Dept 2005], lv denied 4 NY3d 853 [2005]
- People v. Romero, 7 NY3d 911, 912 [2006]
- People v. Overlee, 236 AD2d 133, 136 [1st Dept 1997], lv denied 91 NY2d 976 [1998]
- People v. Harkless, 238 AD3d 646, 647 [1st Dept 2025], lv denied 44 NY3d 1028 [2025]
- People v. Malloy, 55 NY2d 296, 301 [1982], cert denied, 459 US 847 [1982]
- People v. Chiddick, 8 NY3d 445, 447 [2007]
- People v. Rosario, 177 AD3d 417, 417-418 [1st Dept 2019], lv denied 34 NY3d 1162 [2020]
- People v. Cahill, 2 NY3d 14, 57 [2003]
- People v. Almodovar, 62 NY2d 126, 131-132 [1984]

OPINION

People v. Sozio 2026 NY Slip Op 01611

PER CURIAM.

People v Sozio (2026 NY Slip Op 01611) People v Sozio 2026 NY Slip Op 01611 Decided on March 19, 2026 Appellate Division, First Department Published by New York State Law Reporting Bureau pursuant to Judiciary Law § 431. This opinion is uncorrected and subject to revision before publication in the Official Reports. Decided and Entered: March 19, 2026 Before: Moulton, J.P., Friedman, Gesmer, O'Neill Levy, Chan, JJ. Ind No. 70510/23|Appeal No. 6163|Case No. 2024-04374| [*1]The People of the State of New York, Respondent, v Gino Sozio, Defendant-Appellant. The Law Office of Eric Nelson, Staten Island (Eric Nelson of counsel), for appellant. Alvin L. Bragg, Jr., District Attorney, New York (Alex King of counsel), for respondent. Judgment, Supreme Court, New York County (Steven M. Statsinger, J.), rendered June 11, 2024, convicting defendant, after a jury trial, of attempted assault in the first degree as a hate crime, assault in the second degree as a hate crime, and criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree, and sentencing him to an aggregate term of 9 years, unanimously affirmed. The verdict was based on legally sufficient evidence and was not against the weight of the evidence (see People v Lamont , 25 NY3d 315, 318-319 [2015]; People v Danielson , 9 NY3d 342, 348-349 [2007]; see also People v Baque , 43 NY3d 26 [2024]). There is no basis for disturbing the jury's credibility determinations. The totality of the evidence regarding events before, during, and after the crime, including witness testimony and video footage, amply supports the jury's conclusion that defendant committed the specified assault at least "in substantial part because of a belief or perception regarding the race, color, national origin, ancestry . . . [or] religion" of the victim (Penal Law § 485.05[1][b]). Defendant engaged in a verbal altercation with a group of young Muslim men waiting near a halal cart, telling them to "[g]o back to your country" and using racial slurs and anti-Muslim epithets (see People v Wallace , 113 AD3d 413 , 414 [1st Dept 2014], affd 27 NY3d 1037 [2016]). After defendant slashed one of the young men with a knife, he continued using anti-Muslim and racist rhetoric, and he continued spouting racist invectives even after the police arrived and arrested him (see People v Morales , 225 AD3d 549 , 550 [1st Dept 2024], lv denied 41 NY3d 1020 [2024], cert denied — US &mdash, 145 S Ct 1088 [2025]; People v Winston , 205 AD3d 32, 41 [1st Dept 2022], quoting People v Pirozzi , 237 AD2d 628, 630 [2d Dept 1997] ["[a]ny [religious practice-related] epithets are circumstantial evidence that a defendant's actions were motivated by [religious practice] prejudice"). The court properly denied defendant's request for a justification charge, since there was no reasonable view of the evidence, considered in the light most favorable to defendant, to support the charge (see Penal Law § 35.15; People v Brown , 33 NY3d 316 , 320 [2019]). Even fully crediting defendant's testimony, it is undisputed that the victim was unarmed, defendant was the first person to use deadly physical force, and there were no physical barriers preventing defendant from retreating in complete safety (see Penal Law § 35.15[1][b], [2][a]; People v Francis , 15 AD3d 318 [1st Dept 2005], lv denied 4 NY3d 853 [2005]). Defendant did not preserve his present challenge to the prosecutor's summation, and we decline to consider it in the interest of justice (see People v Romero , 7 NY3d 911 , 912 [2006]). As an alternative holding, we find that the prosecutor's summation did not deprive defendant of a fair trial (see People v Overlee , 236 AD2d 133, 136 [1st Dept 1997], lv denied 91 NY2d 976 [1998]). In response to defense counsel's arguments that defendant was merely using "outrageous words" and people were now "getting in trouble for saying certain things," the prosecutor began his summation with general remarks about the changes to society and law that resulted in the passage of hate crime laws, and the prosecutor used direct quotations from defendant to urge the jury to conclude that defendant assaulted the victim based on his perception of the victim's race and religion (see People v Harkless , 238 AD3d 646 , 647 [1st Dept 2025], lv denied 44 NY3d 1028 [2025]). The court meaningfully responded to a jury note asking for "a definition of 'substantial' in regard to the hate crime charges" and observing that "substantial pain" had been defined as "more than a little" (see CPL 310.30; People v Malloy , 55 NY2d 296, 301 [1982], cert denied , 459 US 847 [1982]; see also People v Chiddick , 8 NY3d 445, 447 [2007]). The court properly considered dictionary definitions and the legislative findings and intent of the hate crime provisions, which note that perpetrators may have mixed motivations (see Penal Law § 485.00; see People v Rosario , 177 AD3d 417 , 417-418 [1st Dept 2019], lv denied 34 NY3d 1162 [2020]; see also People v Cahill , 2 NY3d 14, 57 [2003] [first-degree murder provision "would have to be read too expansively to authorize a conviction when a defendant's motivation to eliminate a witness is insubstantial or incidental," but the Legislature cannot have "intended to exclude a defendant . . . merely because the defendant may have had other reasons or motives for the murder"])). Thus, the court's instruction defining "substantial" as "more than a little, or . . . more than slight or trivial" constituted a meaningful response to the jury's inquiry (see People v Almodovar , 62 NY2d 126, 131-132 [1984]). We perceive no basis for reducing the sentence. THIS CONSTITUTES THE DECISION AND ORDER OF THE SUPREME COURT, APPELLATE DIVISION, FIRST DEPARTMENT. ENTERED: March 19, 2026