In re Alejandro Pueblas Rojas

No. 2:25-cv-02548-RFB-BNW (D. Nev. Jan. 16, 2026) · No. 2:25-cv-02548-RFB-BNW · Decided January 16, 2026

SUMMARY

The United States District Court for the District of Nevada granted Alejandro Pueblas Rojas’s petition for a writ of habeas corpus under 28 U.S.C. § 2241. The court held that his detention under the government’s interpretation of 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) was unlawful and violated procedural and substantive due process. The court ordered his release subject to bond conditions and enjoined respondents from denying release based on mandatory detention under that provision.

CASE DETAILS

COURT	United States District Court for the District of Nevada
WRITING FOR THE COURT	Richard F. Boulware II
JURISDICTION	United States District Court for the District of Nevada
DECIDED	January 16, 2026
DOCKET	2:25-cv-02548-RFB-BNW
DISPOSITION	writ_granted
PROCEDURAL POSTURE	Petitioner sought a writ of habeas corpus under 28 U.S.C. § 2241 challenging his immigration detention without an opportunity for release on bond. The district court granted the petition, ordered his immediate release subject to bond conditions, and enjoined the respondents from treating him as subject to mandatory detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A).
STANDARD OF REVIEW	The court reviewed the legality of petitioner’s custody under 28 U.S.C. § 2241 and determined whether the detention violated federal law or the Constitution. The procedural due process claim was analyzed under the three-factor test of Mathews v. Eldridge.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the district court had habeas jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 2241 to review petitioner's immigration detention notwithstanding the jurisdiction-stripping provisions of 8 U.S.C. § 1252.
2. Whether the government's interpretation of 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) required mandatory detention without a bond hearing for petitioner, who entered the United States without inspection but was arrested away from a port of entry.
3. Whether petitioner's detention without an opportunity for release on bond violated the procedural due process protections of the Fifth Amendment.
4. Whether petitioner's detention without an individualized justification violated substantive due process.
5. What relief was appropriate under 28 U.S.C. §§ 2241 and 2243.

HOLDINGS

1. The district court had jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 2241 to review petitioner's challenge to the lawfulness of his immigration detention because the relevant jurisdiction-stripping provisions of 8 U.S.C. § 1252 did not apply.
2. Petitioner was subject to detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a) and its implementing regulations, not mandatory detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), because he entered without inspection and was arrested by ICE away from a port of entry.
3. Detaining petitioner without an opportunity for release on bond violated his procedural due process rights under the Fifth Amendment.
4. Petitioner's continued detention without an individualized special or compelling justification violated substantive due process under the Fifth Amendment.
5. The appropriate relief was immediate release subject to the bond and other conditions previously identified by the immigration judge, together with an injunction barring respondents from continuing detention based on mandatory detention under § 1225(b)(2).

KEY QUOTATIONS

"In sum, the Court finds the Mathews factors weigh heavily in factor of Petitioner, and therefore, his detention without the opportunity for release on bond violates his procedural due process rights." (at *22-24)

"Accordingly, in addition to finding that the challenged regulation violates procedural due process, this Court further finds that Petitioner is currently detained in violation of his substantive due process rights." (at *24-25)

“Respondents are enjoined from denying Petitioner release on bond on the basis that he is subject to mandatory detention pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2).” (Conclusion)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Alejandro Pueblas Rojas, a 31-year-old Mexican citizen, entered the United States without inspection and was detained by ICE in Las Vegas on November 22, 2025. DHS initiated removal proceedings, charging him as removable under 8 U.S.C. §§ 1182(a)(6)(A)(i) and 1182(a)(7)(A)(i)(I). An immigration judge denied a bond hearing based on Matter of Yajure Hurtado, but alternatively found that release on a $2,500 bond and alternatives to detention would be appropriate. Rojas had three minor children, employment in the Las Vegas carpentry industry, no prior criminal history, and the respondents did not assert that he was dangerous or a flight risk.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

ICE detained petitioner on November 22, 2025, and initiated removal proceedings. An immigration judge denied jurisdiction over a custody-redetermination hearing under Matter of Yajure Hurtado, while alternatively determining that a $2,500 bond and alternatives to detention would be appropriate. Petitioner filed a § 2241 petition on December 22, 2025; respondents filed a return, petitioner filed a traverse, and the district court granted relief.

 Petitioner. ORDER 8 9 10 Before the Court is Petitioner Alejandro Pueblas Rojas’s Petition for Writ of Habeas 11 Corpus (“Petition”) pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2241, challenging the lawfulness of his detention at 12 Nevada Southern Detention Center in the custody of the Federal Respondents.
 For the following 13 reasons, the Court grants the Petition. 14 15

I. INTRODUCTION

16 This case is one of a rapidly growing number before this Court challenging the federal 17 government’s reading of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) to authorize mandatory 18 detention of all noncitizens charged with entering the United States without inspection.¹ The 19 executive branch now takes the position that the INA, specifically 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), 20 requires the detention of all undocumented individuals during the pendency of their removal 21 proceedings, which can take months or years. According to this interpretation, detention without 22 a hearing is mandatory, no matter how long a noncitizen has resided in the country, and without 23 any due process to ensure the government has a legitimate, individualized interest in detaining 24 them. 25 According to a leaked internal memo, the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), in 26 27 1 This Court has already granted petitioners relief—both preliminary and on the merits—28 in dozens of similar challenges. See Livia Vicharra v. Henkey, No. 2:25-cv-02336-RFB-EJY, 2025 WL 3564725, at *1 n.1 (D. Nev. Dec. 12, 2025) (collecting cases). 1 conjunction with the Department of Justice (DOJ) adopted this new legal position on a nationwide 2 basis on July 8, 2025.² It subjects millions of undocumented U.S. residents to prolonged detention 3 without the opportunity for release on bond, in contravention of decades of agency practice and 4 robust due process protections hitherto afforded to such residents under 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a).³ On 5 September 5, 2025, the Bureau of Immigration Appeals (BIA) issued a precedential decision
 6 adopting this new interpretation of the government’s detention authority under the INA. See

Matter 7 of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I&N Dec. 216 (BIA 2025) (“Hurtado”). After Hurtado, immigration judges 8 no longer have authority to hear bond requests or grant bond to noncitizens present in the U.S. 9 who entered without inspection. Id. 10 The overwhelming majority of district courts across the country, including this Court, that 11 have considered the government’s new statutory interpretation have found it incorrect and 12 unlawful. See Escobar Salgado v. Mattos, No. 2:25-CV-01872-RFB-EJY, 2025 WL 3205356 (D. 13 Nev. Nov. 17, 2025) (finding “that the plain meaning of the relevant statutory provisions, when 14 interpreted according to fundamental canons of statutory construction,” as well as the legislative 15 history and decades of consistent agency practice establish “that the government’s new 16 interpretation and policy under [§ 1225(b)(2)(A)] is unlawful.”); see also Barco Mercado v. Francis, No. 1:25-CV-06852, at *9-10 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 26, 2025) (collecting over 350 decisions by 18 over 160 different district judges finding the application of §1225(b)(2)(A) to noncitizens residing 19 in the United States unlawful). A nationwide class has also been certified, become final, and 20 granted declaratory relief to all class members, holding that they are being detained without a bond 21 hearing unlawfully. See Bautista v. Santacruz, No. 5:25-CV-01873-SSS-BFM, --- F. Supp. 3d --- 22 -, 2025 WL 3713987 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 18, 2025); Bautista v. Santacruz, No. 5:25-CV-01873-SSS- 23 BFM, 2025 WL 3289861 (C.D. Cal. Nov. 20, 2025); Bautista v. Santacruz, No. 5:25-CV-01873- 24 SSS-BFM, 2025 WL 3288403 (C.D. Cal. Nov. 25, 2025). 25 2 See ICE Memo: Interim Guidance Regarding Detention Authority for Applications for 26 Admission, AILA Doc. No. 25071607 (July 8, 2025), <https://perma.cc/5GKM-JYGX>. 27 3 See Kyle Cheney & Myah Ward, Trump’s new detention policy targets millions of immigrants. Judges keep saying its illegal., Politico (Sept. 20, 2025 at 4:00 p.m. EDT), 28 <https://www.politico.com/news/2025/09/20/ice-detention-immigration-policy-00573850>, <https://perma.cc/L686-E97L>. 1 Petitioner is currently detained without the opportunity for release on bond in the custody 2 of Federal Respondents at Nevada Southern Detention Center, pursuant to this new detention 3 “policy.” For the reasons set forth below, the Court finds that Petitioner’s detention is unlawful 4 under the INA and violates his right to due process under the Fifth Amendment. The Court thus 5 orders his immediate release on bond, with the conditions set forth by the immigration judge in 6 her December 16, 2025, custody redetermination order. See ECF No. 8-4. 7

8 II. BACKGROUND

9 A. Petitioner Alejandro Pueblas Rojas 10 The Court makes the following findings of fact relevant to Petitioner Pueblas Rojas. 11 Petitioner is a 31-year old native and citizen of Mexico, who last entered the United States without 12 inspection at an unknown place and time. See ECF No. 8-5. On November 22, 2025, Petitioner 13 was detained by ICE in Las Vegas, Nevada, and has been in ICE custody at NSDC, in Pahrump, 14 Nevada, ever since. See ECF No. 8-5. Upon detaining Petitioner, DHS initiated removal 15 proceedings against him through the issuance of a Notice to Appear (NTA), charging Petitioner as 16 removable under 8 U.S.C. §§ 1182(a)(6)(A)(i) and 1182(a)(7)(A)(i)(I). See ECF No. 8-3. His last 17 interaction with immigration authorities prior to this arrest was in 2022. See ECF No. 8-5. 18 Petitioner requested a custody redetermination (bond) hearing before the immigration 19 court, and on December 16, 2025, Immigration Judge Lindsay Roberts denied Petitioner release on 20 bond for lack of jurisdiction under Hurtado,⁴ holding in the alternative that if Hurtado did not 21 deprive the immigration court of jurisdiction, release on bond in the amount of $2,500 plus 22 alternatives to detention at the discretion of DHS would be appropriate. See ECF No. 8-4. 23 Petitioner has three minor children, and prior to his detention, he was employed in the 24 carpentry industry in Las Vegas, Nevada. See ECF No. 8-5. He has no prior criminal history. See 25 26 4 IJ Roberts also stated, in her reasoning for finding no jurisdiction pursuant to Hurtado, that, at the time of the order (December 16, 2025), the District Court's order in Maldonado Bautista 27 v. Santacruz et al. was not yet final and therefore not binding on the immigration court. See ECF No. 8-4. The Court finds that this order has since become final and been extended to class 28 members, including Petitioner. See Bautista v. Santacruz, No. 5:25-CV-01873-SSS-BFM, --- F. Supp. 3d ----, 2025 WL 3713987 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 18, 2025). 1 id. 2 B. Legal Background 3 The Court fully incorporates by reference the legal background regarding the government's 4 detention authority and removal proceedings under the INA, as well as the government's new 5 statutory reading and mass detention "policy," set forth in its ruling in Escobar Salgado. 2025 WL 6 3205356, at *2-6. 7

8 III. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

9 On December 22, 2025, Petitioner filed his 28 U.S.C. § 2241 Petition for Writ of Habeas 10 Corpus against Respondents, challenging his detention at NSDC. See ECF No. 1. On 11 December 22, 2025, this case was transferred to the undersigned judge as related to three pending

12 putative class actions pending before the Court. See ECF No. 2. That same day, this Court ordered 13 Respondents to show cause, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2243, by January 6, 2026, why the Court 14 should not grant the Petition. See ECF No. 4. Counsel for Federal Respondents filed a notice of 15 appearance on December 30, 2025, and entered their Return on January 6, 2026. See ECF Nos. 7- 16 8. Counsel for Respondent John Mattos filed joinder to the Return on January 8, 2026. See ECF

17 No. 9. On January 13, 2026, Petitioner filed his Traverse. See ECF No. 10.

18 The Court's Order follows. 19

20 IV. LEGAL STANDARD

21 The Constitution guarantees that the writ of habeas corpus is "available to every individual 22 detained within the United States." Hamdi v. Rumsfeld, 542 U.S. 507, 525 (2004) (citing U.S. 23 Const., Art I, § 9, cl. 2). "Its province, shaped to guarantee the most fundamental of all rights, is 24 to provide an effective and speedy instrument by which judicial inquiry may be had into the legality 25 of the detention of a person." Carafas v. LaVallee, 391 U.S. 234, 238 (1968). "The essence of 26 habeas corpus is an attack by a person in custody upon the legality of that custody, and . . . the 27 traditional function of the writ is to secure release from illegal custody." Preiser v.

Rodriguez, 411 U.S. 475, 484 (1973). 1 A writ of habeas corpus may be granted to a petitioner who demonstrates that he is in 2 custody in violation of the Constitution or federal law. 28 U.S.C. § 2241(c)(3). Historically, “the 3 writ of habeas corpus has served as a means of reviewing the legality of Executive detention, and 4 it is in that context that its protections have been strongest.” I.N.S. v. St. Cyr, 533 U.S. 289, 301 (2001). Accordingly, a district court’s habeas jurisdiction includes challenges to immigration- 6 related detention. See Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, 687 (2001); see also Demore v. Kim, 538 U.S. 510, 517 (2003); Trump v. J. G. G., 604 U.S. 670, 672 (2025) (describing immigration 8 detainees’ challenge to their confinement and removal as falling “within the ‘core’ of the writ of 9 habeas corpus.”) (per curiam) (citations omitted). “The application for the writ usurps the attention 10 and displaces the calendar of the judge or justice who entertains it and receives prompt action from 11 him within the four corners of the application.” Yong v. I.N.S., 208 F.3d 1116, 1120 (9th Cir. 12 2000) (citation omitted). 13

14 V. DISCUSSION

15 A. Jurisdiction 16 As an initial matter, the Court has habeas jurisdiction to review Petitioner’s challenge to 17 the lawfulness of his detention, because the relevant jurisdiction stripping provisions of the INA, 18 8 U.S.C. § 1252 do not apply. See Escobar Salgado, 2025 WL 3205356, at *8-10; Hernandez 19 Duran v. Bernacke, 2:25-cv-2105-RFB-EJY, 2025 WL 3237451, at *4 (Nov. 19, 2025). In 20 evaluating the jurisdiction stripping provisions of the INA, the Court is guided “by the general rule 21 to resolve any ambiguities in a jurisdiction-stripping statute in favor of the narrower interpretation 22 and by the strong presumption in favor of judicial review.” Arce v. United States, 899 F.3d 796, 801 (9th Cir. 2018) (per curiam) (internal quotations and citations omitted). 24 B. Lawfulness of Petitioner’s Detention under the INA 25 The Court first finds that the government’s new interpretation of the INA, and Petitioner’s 26 detention thereunder, is unlawful. This interpretation of the statutory scheme of §§ 1225 and 1226 27 is flawed and contradicts both the statutory framework and the decades of agency practice applying 28 § 1226(a) to people like Petitioner. This Court thus fully incorporates by reference its holding and 1 findings in Escobar Salgado v. Mattos. See 2025 WL 3205356, at *10-22. 2 Petitioner entered the United States without inspection and was arrested and detained by 3 ICE in Las Vegas, Nevada, far from any port of entry. Accordingly, the Court finds Petitioner is 4 subject to detention under § 1226(a) and its implementing regulations, not § 1225(b)(2)(A), and 5 that the government’s new interpretation and policy under that provision is unlawful. See Escobar 6 Salgado, 2025 WL 3205356, at *10-22. 7 C. Due Process 8 This Court also finds Petitioner’s ongoing detention without the opportunity for release 9 on bond under § 1225(b)(2) is unconstitutional under the Due Process Clause of the Fifth 10 Amendment. Even if this Court were to accept the government’s new reading of § 1225(b)(2), it 11 would still have to contend with Petitioner’s due process claim on this basis. This Court 12 incorporates by reference the legal authorities and standards set forth in Escobar Salgado v. 13 Mattos regarding the due process rights of noncitizens. 2025 WL 3205356, at *22-24. For the 14 following reasons, the Court finds that Petitioner is currently being detained without the 15 opportunity for release on bond in violation of his procedural and substantive due process rights. 16 1. Procedural Due Process 17 To determine whether detention violates procedural due process, courts apply the three- 18 part test set forth in Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319 (1976). See Rodriguez Diaz v. Garland, 19 53 F.4th 1189, 1203-07 (9th Cir. 2022) (collecting cases and applying the Mathews test in a similar 20 immigration detention context and holding “[u]ltimately, Mathews remains a flexible test that can 21 and must account for the heightened governmental interest in the immigration detention 22 context”). 23 Under Mathews, the courts weigh the following three factors: (1) “the private interest that 24 will be affected by the official action”; (2) “the risk of an erroneous deprivation of such interest 25 through the procedures used, and the probable value, if any, of additional or substitute procedural 26 safeguards”; and (3) “the Government’s interest, including the function involved and the fiscal and 27 administrative burdens that the additional or substitute procedural requirement would 28 entail.” Mathews, 424 U.S. at 335. 1 The first Mathews factor considers the private interest affected by the government’s 2 ongoing detention of Petitioner without the opportunity for release on bond. See Mathews, 424 3 U.S. at 335. Here, that is Petitioner’s interest in being free from imprisonment, “the most elemental 4 of liberty interests.” Hamdi, 542 U.S. at 529. In this country, liberty is the norm and detention “is 5 the carefully limited exception.” United States v. Salerno, 481 U.S. 739, 755 (1987); see 6 also Rodriguez Diaz, 53 F.4th At 1207 (“An individual’s private interest in freedom from 7 prolonged detention is unquestionably substantial.”) (citations omitted). Additionally, Petitioner’s 8 liberty interest is not diminished by any final order of removal, or the availability of any existing 9 process to challenge Respondents’ decision to detain him without bond. Cf. id. at 1208 (holding 10 the habeas petitioner’s liberty interest was diminished by the fact that he was subject to a final 11 order of removal, had already been afforded an individualized bond hearing, and had additional 12 process available to him through a further bonding hearing before an IJ upon a showing of 13 materially changed circumstances). 14 Second, the Court considers “the risk of an erroneous deprivation of [Petitioner’s] interest 15 through the procedures used, and the probable value, if any, of additional procedures.” Mathews, 16 424 U.S. at 335. There are no existing procedures whatsoever for Petitioner to challenge his 17 detention pending the conclusion of his removal proceedings without the opportunity for release 18 on bond. The risk of erroneous deprivation is extraordinarily high where ICE and DHS agency 19 officials have sole, unguided, and unreviewable discretion to detain Petitioner without any 20 individualized showing of why his detention is warranted, nor any process for Petitioner to 21 challenge the exercise of that discretion. The likelihood of erroneous deprivation caused by this 22 lack of process is demonstrated by numerous prior cases before this Court where an IJ held a bond 23 hearing for a petitioner prior to Hurtado and found that the government had not established a 24 justification for detention. See, e.g., Escobar Salgado, 2025 WL 3205356; Aparicio v. Noem, No. 25 2:25-CV-01919-RFB-DJA, 2025 WL 2998098 (D. Nev. Oct. 23, 2025); Berto Mendez v. Noem,

26 No. 2:25-cv-02602-RFB-MDC, 2025 WL 3124285 (D. Nev. Nov. 7, 2025). Moreover, given that

27 Petitioner has significant ties to the country, specifically as it relates to his employment in Las 28 Vegas, and because Respondents have not asserted that he is dangerous or a flight risk, the Court 1 finds that he is being arbitrarily and unjustifiably deprived of his liberty. 2 The additional procedures afforded under § 1226(a), including 3 an individualized, constitutionally adequate custody redetermination by an immigration 4 judge, i.e., a bond hearing, substantially mitigate the risk of erroneous deprivation of Petitioner's 5 liberty, because those procedures require the government to establish that Petitioner presents a 6 flight risk or danger to the community. This would account for the constitutional requirement that 7 "once the flight risk justification evaporates, the only special circumstance [] present is the alien's 8 removable status itself, which bears no relation to a detainee's dangerousness." Zadvydas, 553 U.S. 9 at 691-92. An adverse decision by an immigration judge in a bond hearing can further be appealed, 10 and Petitioner could seek additional custody redeterminations based on changed circumstances, 11 such that the outcome of a bond hearing would be subject to "numerous levels of review, each 12 offering [Petitioner] the opportunity to be heard by a neutral decisionmaker." Rodriguez Diaz, 53 13 F.4th at 1210 (finding the bond hearing procedures available through the implementing regulations 14 of § 1226(a) would render "the risk of erroneous deprivation . . . relatively small.") (citation 15 omitted). As such, the second Mathews factor also weighs heavily in favor of granting Petitioner 16 the procedural protections under § 1226(a). 17 The third and final Mathews factor considers the "Government's interest, including the 18 function involved and the fiscal and administrative burdens that the additional or substitute 19 procedural requirement would entail." 424 U.S. at 335.
The Court acknowledges that the 20 government's interests in enforcing immigration laws, including "protecting the public from 21 dangerous criminal aliens" and "securing an alien's ultimate removal," are "interests of the highest 22 order." Rodriguez Diaz, 53 F.4th at 1188-89.
These interests are in fact served by the 23 individualized determination by an immigration judge, based on a review of evidence presented 24 by the government and the noncitizen, as to whether an individual is dangerous or at risk of fleeing 25 removal proceedings, under existing, well-established procedures. In failing to articulate any 26 individualized reason why detaining Petitioner is necessary to enforce immigration law, the 27 question arises "whether the detention is not to facilitate deportation, or to protect against risk of 28 flight or dangerousness, but to incarcerate for other reasons." Demore, 538 U.S. at 532-33 1 (Kennedy, J. concurring). And the government has no interest in the unjustified deprivation of a 2 person's liberty. 3 Further, the Court finds that limiting the use of detention to only those noncitizens who are 4 dangerous or a flight risk through existing bond procedures serves the government and public's 5 interest by reducing the fiscal and administrative burdens attendant to immigration 6 detention. See Hernandez v. Sessions, 872 F.3d 976, 996 (9th Cir. 2017) (Noting in 2017 that "the 7 costs to the public of immigration detention are staggering: $158 each day per detainee, amounting 8 to a total

daily cost of $6.5 million. Supervised release programs cost much less by comparison: 9 between 17 cents and 17 dollars each day per person.”). 10 In sum, the Court finds the Mathews factors weigh heavily in factor of Petitioner, and 11 therefore, his detention without the opportunity for release on bond violates his procedural due 12 process rights. 13 2. Substantive Due Process 14 Immigration detention violates the Due Process Clause unless it is ordered in a criminal 15 proceeding with adequate procedural protections, or in non-punitive circumstances “where a 16 special justification . . . outweighs the individual’s constitutionally protected interest in avoiding 17 physical restraint.” Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 690. 18 Respondents have asserted absolutely no individualized justification—let alone a special 19 or compelling justification—to continue to deprive Petitioner of his physical liberty. Accordingly, 20 in addition to finding that the challenged regulation violates procedural due process, this Court 21 further finds that Petitioner is currently detained in violation of his substantive due process 22 rights. See Escobar Salgado, 2025 WL 3205356, at *25. 23 D. Scope of Relief 24 The federal habeas corpus statute “does not limit the relief that may be granted to discharge 25 of the applicant from physical custody.” Carafas v. LaVallee, 391 U.S. 234, 238 (1968). “Its 26 mandate is broad with respect to the relief that may be granted.” Id. “It provides that ‘[t]he court 27 shall ... dispose of the matter as law and justice require.’” Id. (quoting 28 U.S.C. § 2243). The Court 28 finds that the specific harm suffered by Petitioner, continued detention pursuant to the government’s unlawful policy and incorrect statutory interpretation after he established that 2 | continued detention was not warranted before the Las Vegas Immigration Court, is remedied by 3 | ordering his immediate release, subject to the bond conditions originally imposed by the IJ in the 4 | alternative. 5

6 VI. CONCLUSION

7 Based on the foregoing, and on the record and proceedings herein, IT IS HEREBY 8 | ORDERED that Petitioner Pueblas Rojas’s Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus is GRANTED. 9 Respondents are ORDERED to release Petitioner from custody by 5:00 p.m. on January 16, 2026. Petitioner shall be subject to the bond and other conditions imposed by the JJ. 11 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Respondents are enjoined from denying Petitioner 12 | release on bond on the basis that he is subject to mandatory detention pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 13 | 1225(b)(2). Thus, the Court ORDERS that Respondents are enjoined from invoking the automatic stay to continue Petitioner’s detention, as the Court has already found the automatic stay 15 | unconstitutional and adopts that finding here. See Herrera v. Knight, No. 2:25-CV-01366-RFB- DJA, 2025 WL 2581792, at *13 (D. Nev. Sept. 5, 2025). 17 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Respondents shall file a notice of compliance with 18 | this Order by January 20, 2026. 19 The Court has received notice of the hardship other petitioners have incurred in their efforts 20 | to satisfy bond, and therefore, the Court FURTHER ORDERS that Petitioner be afforded until 21) February 28, 2026, to satisfy any monetary bond conditions. 22 23 DATED: January 16, 2026. mma 24
