

APPELLATE TERM OF THE SUPREME COURT OF NEW YORK

Dubor Associates v. Richburg

50 Misc. 3d 13 (App. Term 2015) · Decided August 6, 2015

SUMMARY

The court reversed an order granting a landlord leave to execute a warrant of eviction based on an alleged violation of a stipulation permanently excluding the tenant's son from the premises. It held that strict enforcement was unjust because the tenant substantially complied with the stipulation, the alleged violations were de minimis or insufficiently proven, and the landlord had itself hired the son to work on the property. The landlord's motion for leave to execute the warrant was therefore denied.

CASE DETAILS

COURT	Appellate Term of the Supreme Court of New York
WRITING FOR THE COURT	Pesce, P.J.; Aliotta, J.; Elliot, J.
JURISDICTION	New York
DECIDED	August 6, 2015
DISPOSITION	reversed
PROCEDURAL POSTURE	Tenant appealed from an order of the Civil Court granting the landlord's motion for leave to execute a warrant of eviction based on an alleged violation of a settlement stipulation permanently excluding the tenant's son from the premises.
STANDARD OF REVIEW	Review of whether the hearing evidence established a violation of the settlement stipulation sufficient to justify termination of the tenancy and strict enforcement of the stipulation.
PRECEDENTIAL VALUE	published
PARTIES	Andrea Richburg v. Dubor Associates

TOPICS

eviction holdover tenancy contracts appellate procedure remedies

PRACTICE AREAS

landlord-tenant real estate contracts appellate procedure

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the landlord proved a violation of the permanent-exclusion settlement stipulation sufficient to warrant termination of the tenant's long-term tenancy and execution of the warrant of eviction.
2. Whether strict enforcement of the court-ordered stipulation would be unjust or inequitable under the circumstances.

HOLDINGS

1. The landlord failed to prove a violation of the stipulation sufficient to warrant termination of the tenant's long-term tenancy and execution of the warrant of eviction.
2. Although settlement stipulations are favored and ordinarily enforced, a court may relieve a party from the consequences of strict enforcement of a court-ordered stipulation when enforcement would be unjust or inequitable, including where the party substantially complied and the default was de minimis.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“Nevertheless, it is well settled that the enforcement of a court-ordered stipulation of settlement is “subject to the supervision of the courts”” (at 15)

“Based on all of the circumstances presented, we find that landlord failed to prove a violation of the stipulation sufficient to warrant the termination of tenant’s long-term tenancy” (at 16)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Andrea Richburg's tenancy was subject to a settlement stipulation permanently excluding her son from the apartment, building, and property. About two and one-half years later, the landlord alleged that Richburg had allowed her son to reside at or visit the premises daily. The hearing evidence established at most a short, unannounced encounter at the tenant's door concerning funeral arrangements, disputed whether the son entered the apartment, and several alleged sightings of the son on a large property. The landlord had also hired the son after the stipulation was entered, and he worked on the property and apparently entered buildings and apartments.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The tenant and landlord entered into a stipulation requiring the tenant never to allow or facilitate her son's access to the premises. Approximately two and one-half years later, the landlord sought leave to execute the warrant of eviction, alleging that the tenant had allowed her son to reside at or visit the premises. After a hearing, the Civil Court granted the motion. The Appellate Term reversed and denied the landlord's motion.

DISPOSITION

reversed

REMAND INSTRUCTIONS

None stated; the landlord's motion for leave to execute the warrant of eviction was denied.

CASES CITED

- Hallock v State of New York, 64 NY2d 224 (1984)
- Matter of Frutiger, 29 NY2d 143 (1971)
- Malvin v Schwartz, 65 AD2d 769, 769 (1978), affd, 48 NY2d 693 (1979)
- Weitz v Murphy, 241 AD2d 547 (1997)
- Bank of N.Y. v Forlini, 220 AD2d 377 (1995)
- Winthrop Realty, LLC v Menal, 21 Misc 3d 141[A], 2008 NY Slip Op 52383[U] (App Term, 2d Dept, 2d & 11th Jud Dists 2008)
- J & H Mgt. Corp. v W.W.R.S Automotive Inc., 7 Misc 3d 134[A], 2005 NY Slip Op 50742[U] (App Term, 2d Dept, 2d & 11th Jud Dists 2005)
- Matter of Vega v Franco, 277 AD2d 131, 131 (2000)
- Matter of Patrick v Hernandez, 309 AD2d 566 (2003)
- Matter of Lopez v New York City Hous. Auth., 121 AD3d 610 (2014)
- Matter of Romano v New York City Hous. Auth., 121 AD3d 503 (2014)
- Matter of Liverman v New York City Hous. Auth., 118 AD3d 580, 580 (2014)
- Matter of Horne v New York City Hous. Auth., 113 AD3d 575 (2014)
- Matter of Cruz v New York City Hous. Auth., 106 AD3d 631 (2013)
- Matter of Romero v Martinez, 280 AD2d 58, 63 (2001)
- Tri Cruger Realty, LLC v Masterson, 36 Misc 3d 145[A], 2012 NY Slip Op 51590[U] (App Term, 1st Dept 2012)
- 160 W. 118th St. Corp. v Gary, 32 Misc 3d 1 (App Term, 1st Dept 2011)