

SUPREME COURT OF OKLAHOMA

Oklahoma Council of Public Affairs v. Smalley

2019 OK 48 (Okla. 2019) · No. 117962 · Decided June 19, 2019

SUMMARY

The Oklahoma Supreme Court held that the gist of Initiative Petition 419, State Question 802, was sufficient and not misleading in describing a proposed Medicaid expansion using a 133% federal poverty-level threshold. The Court also denied the remaining constitutional challenges to the initiative petition.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the gist of Initiative Petition 419 was misleading or insufficient because it stated that Medicaid eligibility would extend to adults whose income did not exceed 133% of the federal poverty level.
2. Whether the remaining constitutional challenges to Initiative Petition 419, State Question 802, had merit.

HOLDINGS

1. The gist's use of 133% of the federal poverty level was not misleading, and the gist was sufficient.
2. The remaining constitutional challenges to Initiative Petition 419, State Question 802, were meritless and were denied.

KEY QUOTATIONS

"By its very nature, the gist is a simple statement that summarizes the petition." (§ 1)

"The gist informs signers of what the proposed amendment is intended to do--"expand Oklahoma's Medicaid program to include certain low-income adults between the ages of 18 and 65 whose income does not exceed 133% of the federal poverty level, as permitted under the federal Medicaid laws."" (§ 1)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Initiative Petition 419, State Question 802, proposed expanding Oklahoma's Medicaid program to certain low-income adults ages 18 through 65 whose income did not exceed 133% of the federal poverty level. Petitioners argued that the gist's reference to 133% was misleading and also challenged the constitutionality of the initiative.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Oklahoma Supreme Court heard oral argument on June 18, 2019, concerning the protest to Initiative Petition 419. The court denied the challenge to the gist and denied the remaining constitutional challenges.
