QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the court should enter default judgment after Rock Road failed to plead or otherwise defend.
2. Whether Mellenthin's well-pleaded allegations established an ADA violation warranting injunctive relief.
3. Whether the requested injunction should require removal of the alleged barriers only where removal is readily achievable.
4. Whether the court should order closure of the property until the barriers were removed.

HOLDINGS

1. A default judgment may be entered after the Clerk has entered default when the complaint's well-pleaded factual allegations, taken as true, establish a legitimate cause of action; default does not admit legal conclusions.
2. The well-pleaded allegations that Rock Road's property contained specified architectural and accessibility barriers established an ADA violation sufficient to support injunctive relief under 42 U.S.C. § 12188(a).
3. Rock Road must remove the specified barriers only where removal is readily achievable, meaning easily accomplishable and capable of being carried out without much difficulty or expense.
4. The court declined to order closure of the property pending removal of the alleged barriers.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“Default judgments are disfavored in the law, and before granting one, a court should satisfy itself that the moving party is entitled to judgment by reviewing the sufficiency of the complaint and the substantive merits of the plaintiff’s claim.”

“While courts deem all well-pleaded facts admitted upon default, “it remains for the [district] court to consider whether the unchallenged facts constitute a legitimate cause of action, since a party in default does not admit mere conclusions of law.””

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Mellenthin alleged that Rock Road's property contained numerous architectural and accessibility barriers affecting parking spaces, accessible routes, entrances, and restroom facilities. He sought injunctive relief under the ADA. Rock Road did not answer or otherwise defend after service, resulting in entry of default.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Mellenthin filed an ADA action in March 2025 and served Rock Road on July 21, 2025. Rock Road failed to plead or otherwise defend, and the Clerk entered default on September 11, 2025. The district court granted

Mellenthin's motion for default judgment and injunctive relief, but declined to order closure of the property; it directed service of the order and judgment and proof of service.
