PENNSYLVANIA

Mujica-Marquez v. Hoover

No. 4:26-CV-00623 (M.D. Pa. Apr. 3, 2026) · No. No. 4:26-CV-00623 · Decided April 3, 2026

SUMMARY

The United States District Court for the Middle District of Pennsylvania granted Luis Mujica-Marquez’s 28 U.S.C. § 2241 petition challenging his detention by ICE without a bond hearing. The court held that 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a), rather than the mandatory-detention provision in § 1225(b), governed because Mujica-Marquez had already entered and resided in the United States before his arrest. The court concluded that continued detention without a bond hearing violated the Fifth Amendment and ordered the Government to provide a bond hearing or release him.

PRACTICE AREAS

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether an individual who entered the United States and was arrested after residing in the country for an extended period is subject to detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b) or 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a).
2. Whether detention under § 1226(a) entitles the detainee to a bond hearing.
3. Whether continued detention without a bond hearing violates the detainee's Fifth Amendment due process rights.

HOLDINGS

1. Section 1226(a), rather than § 1225(b)(2)(A), governs an individual who was arrested after entering and residing in the United States for an extended period; § 1225(b) applies to individuals detained while entering or actively attempting to enter the country.
2. Because § 1226(a) applies, mandatory detention is not warranted and Mujica-Marquez must receive a bond hearing.
3. Mujica-Marquez's continued detention without a bond hearing violates his Fifth Amendment due process rights.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“In sum, a plain reading of § 1225(b) demonstrates that it applies to individuals who are attempting to enter the United States, not those already within the country.” (II)

“These definitions create dual tracks: if an individual is detained attempting to enter the country illegally or while otherwise presenting themselves for inspection and entry, they are subject to mandatory detention pursuant to § 1225. If they are arrested after having already entered the country, they are subject to detention under § 1226 and are entitled to a bond hearing.” (II)

“In balancing these three factors then, it is clear that Mujica-Marquez’s continued detention without a bond hearing violates his due process rights.” (III)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Luis Mujica-Marquez, a Venezuelan citizen, entered the United States in July 2022, was initially detained and later released, and subsequently received Temporary Protected Status until April 2, 2025. ICE arrested him on March 3, 2026, after he had lived in the United States for an extended period, and detained him without a bond hearing. The Government treated his detention as mandatory under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b), while Mujica-Marquez contended that 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a) applied because he had already entered the country.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Mujica-Marquez, detained by ICE at the Clinton County Correctional Facility, filed a § 2241 petition seeking release or a bond hearing. He argued that his detention was governed by 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a), while the Government argued that mandatory detention under § 1225(b) applied. The district court granted the petition, concluding that § 1226(a) governed and that continued detention without a bond hearing violated due process.

DISPOSITION

REMAND INSTRUCTIONS

The Government must provide Mujica-Marquez with a bond hearing or release him from custody.

OPINION

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE MIDDLE DISTRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA LUIS MUJICA-MARQUEZ, No. 4:26-CV-00623 Petitioner, (Chief Judge Brann) v. ANGELA HOOVER, et al., Respondents. MEMORANDUM OPINION APRIL 3, 2026

I. BACKGROUND Luis Mujica-Marquez, currently a detainee of the United States Department of Homeland Security, Immigration and Customs Enforcement (“ICE”), has filed this 28 U.S.C. § 2241 petition seeking his release from ICE custody.¹ Mujica- Marquez is currently detained at the Clinton County Correctional Facility located within the Middle District of Pennsylvania.² Mujica-Marquez, a citizen and native of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, entered the United States of America in July 2022; he was detained but subsequently released from custody.³ He later applied for, and received, Temporary 1 Doc.

1. 2 Id. at 2. Protected Status, which lasted until April 2, 2025.⁴ On March 3, 2026, Mujica-Marquez was arrested by ICE and has been detained since that date.⁵ In March of 2026, Mujica-Marquez filed this § 2241 petition asserting that he is entitled to a bond hearing pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a).⁶ Specifically, Mujica- Marquez argues that, because he was detained inside of the United States, his detention is governed by 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a), and the Government is incorrect that 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)—which provides for mandatory detention without a bond hearing—applies to him.⁷ The failure to provide him with a bond hearing, Mujica- Marquez argues, violates his due process rights.⁸ Respondents contend that § 1225(b) applies to all individuals who are not inspected and lawfully admitted to the country, regardless of whether they manage to enter the country surreptitiously, and Mujica-Marquez is therefore subject to mandatory detention without a bond hearing.⁹ Moreover, Respondents assert that Mujica-Marquez’s continued detention without a bond hearing does not violate his due process rights.¹⁰ The Court has considered the parties’ arguments.

For the reasons discussed below, the petition will be granted. 4 Id. at 8. 5 Id. 6 See Doc. 1. 7 Id. at 8-16. 8 Id. at 16-21. 9 Doc. 8 at 17-41. 10 Id. at 41-44. II. DISCUSSION Mujica-Marquez brings his claims pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2241, which provides, as relevant here, that it applies to any individual who “in custody for an act done or omitted in pursuance of an Act of Congress, or an order, process, judgment or decree of a court or judge of the United States.”¹¹ As the Supreme Court of the United States has emphasized, when ICE detainees challenge “their confinement” pending removal, “their claims fall within the ‘core’ of the writ of habeas corpus and thus must be brought in” a 28 U.S.C. § 2241 petition.¹² The determination of whether Mujica-Marquez is improperly detained requires an examination of two separate provisions in immigration law: 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b) and 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a).

Section 1225(b) provides that “in the case of an alien who is an applicant for admission, if the examining immigration officer determines that an alien seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted, the alien shall be detained” pending removal hearings.¹³ In contrast, 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a) states only that “an alien may be arrested and detained pending a decision on whether the alien is to be removed from the United States.” In accordance with that language, “[f]ederal regulations provide that aliens detained under § 1226(a) receive bond hearings at the outset of detention.”¹⁴ These two 11 28 U.S.C. § 2241(c)(2).

12 Trump v. J. G. G., 604 U.S. 670, 672 (2025). 13 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A). 14 Jennings v. Rodriguez, 583 U.S. 281, 306 (2018). provisions therefore provide for opposite outcomes: under § 1225(b) Mujica- Marquez may not receive a bond hearing, but under § 1226(a) he must receive such a hearing.

The Court therefore examines each statute to determine which applies to Mujica-Marquez. Turning first to 8 U.S.C. § 1225, as the Honorable Karoline Mehalchick recently observed, “[t]o trigger § 1225(b)(2)(A), an examining immigration officer must determine that an individual is (1) an applicant for admission, (2) seeking admission, and (3) not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted.”¹⁵ “Section 1225(b)(2)(A) applies only to an alien who is both an ‘applicant for admission’ and ‘seeking admission.’”¹⁶ Section 1225 defines “applicant for admission” as “[a]n alien present in the United States who has not been admitted or who arrives in the United States (whether or not at a designated port of arrival and including an alien who is brought to the United States after having been interdicted in international or United States waters).”¹⁷ While applicable federal law does not define “alien seeking admission,” courts construe the plain language of “seeking admission” to describe “active and 15 Ramirez-Montoya v. Rose, No. 3:25-CV-02411, 2025 WL 3709045, at *4 (M.D.

Pa. Dec. 22, 2025). 16 Id. 17 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1). ongoing conduct, such as physically attempting to come into the United States at a border or port of entry.”¹⁸ As courts have observed, such a “reading comports with the Supreme Court’s finding in Jennings v. Rodriguez,”¹⁹ wherein the Supreme Court “noted [that] § 1225(b) applies primarily to aliens seeking entry into the United States.”²⁰ That reading of “seeking admission” further “preserves a distinction between ‘seeking admission’ and the separate term ‘applicant for admission,’ ensuring that each phrase carries independent meaning.”²¹ In sum, a plain reading of § 1225(b) demonstrates that it applies to individuals who are attempting to enter the United States, not those already within the country.

With respect to § 1226, the Supreme Court has been explicit that “§ 1226 applies to aliens already present in the United States.”²² That Section “creates a default rule for those aliens by permitting—but not requiring—the Attorney General to issue warrants for their arrest and detention pending removal proceedings” and “permit[ting] the Attorney General to release those aliens on bond.”²³ Therefore, while § 1225 applies to individuals detained while entering or attempting to enter the country, § 1226 applies generally to those who are detained within the country.

18 Ramirez-Montoya, 2025 WL 3709045, at *4 (collecting cases). 19 Id. 20 Jennings, 583 U.S. at 297. 21 Ramirez-Montoya, 2025 WL 3709045, at *4. 22 Jennings, 583 U.S. at 303. 23 Id. These definitions create dual tracks: if an individual is detained attempting to enter the country illegally or while otherwise presenting themselves for inspection and entry, they are subject to mandatory detention pursuant to § 1225.

If they are arrested after having already entered the country, they are subject to detention under § 1226 and are entitled to a bond hearing. Applying that distinction here, Mujica-Marquez must be detained pursuant to § 1226 and is therefore entitled to a bond hearing. Mujica-Marquez entered the United States in July of 2022 and, at that time, he could reasonably have been construed as seeking admission and therefore as an individual governed by § 1225.²⁴ However, he was not arrested and detained until March of 2026²⁵ after having resided “in the United States for an extended period of time”; accordingly he is no longer seeking admission and “§ 1226(a), not § 1225(b)(2)(A), applies to” Mujica- Marquez during his detention.²⁶ Because § 1226(a) applies, mandatory detention is not warranted, and he must be provided with a bond hearing.²⁷ Having determined that Mujica-Marquez is being detained under the wrong section of immigration law and is improperly being denied a bond hearing, the Court 24 Doc.

1 at 7. 25 Id. at 8. 26 Ramirez-Montoya, 2025 WL 3709045, at *5. 27 See, e.g., Patel v. O’Neil, No. 3:25-CV-2185, 2025 WL 3516865, at *5 (M.D. Pa. Dec. 8, 2025) (finding in similar circumstances that § 1226(a) applies). must next determine whether Respondents' actions violate Mujica-Marquez's Fifth Amendment Due Process rights.²⁸ The Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution provides that no person shall "be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law." That Amendment "applies to all 'persons' within the United States, including aliens, whether their presence here is lawful, unlawful, temporary, or permanent,"²⁹ and therefore individuals "facing removal are entitled to due process."³⁰ This Court applies the balancing test developed in *Mathews v. Eldridge*³¹ to determine whether the failure to provide Mujica-Marquez with a bond hearing under § 1226(a) violates his due process rights.³² Under that test, courts must consider three distinct factors: First, the private interest that will be affected by the official action; second, the risk of an erroneous deprivation of such interest through the procedures used, and the probable value, if any, of additional or substitute procedural safeguards; and finally, the Government's interest, including the function involved and the fiscal and administrative burdens that the additional or substitute procedural requirement would entail.³³ 28 Mujica-Marquez brings claims under the Fifth Amendment, the Administrative Procedure Act, and the violation of various regulations.

Doc. 1 at 21-27. Because this Court will resolve the issue on the Fifth Amendment question, it need not address the remaining claims. 29 Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, 693 (2001). 30 Abdulai v. Ashcroft, 239 F.3d 542, 549 (3d Cir. 2001). 31 424 U.S. 319, 335 (1976). 32 Cf. Sewak v. I.N.S., 900 F.2d 667, 674 (3d Cir. 1990) (applying that test to determine whether applicable deportation regulations were capable of protecting an individual's due process rights).

33 Mathews, 424 U.S. at 335. The first factor weighs heavily in favor of concluding that Petitioners' actions have deprived Mujica-Marquez of his due process rights because "[f]reedom from imprisonment—from government custody, detention, or other forms of physical restraint—lies at the heart of the liberty that Clause protects."³⁴ The second factor likewise favors Mujica-Marquez, "as he is presently and erroneously detained under the mandatory detention provisions of § 1225, without an opportunity for a bond hearing."³⁵ Finally, as other courts have observed, the Government does have an interest in detaining noncitizens to ensure "'the appearance of aliens at future immigration proceedings' and 'prevent[] danger to the community.'"³⁶ These interests certainly justify detaining individuals in appropriate circumstances.

But they cannot weigh in favor of Respondents when they are denying wholesale a bond hearing—the very purposes of which is to establish whether an individual "poses [a] flight risk [or a] danger to the community."³⁷ In balancing these three factors then, it is clear that Mujica-Marquez's continued detention without a bond hearing violates his due process rights.

Consequently, the Court will grant his § 2241 petition. 34 Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 690. See also Patel, 2025 WL 3516865, at *6; Ramirez-Montoya, 2025 WL 3709045, at *6. 35 Patel, 2025 WL

Accordingly, his petition will be granted, and the Government will be required to provide Mujica-Marquez with a bond hearing or release him from custody. An appropriate Order follows. BY THE COURT: s/ Matthew W. Brann Matthew W. Brann Chief United States District Judge
