QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether an alleged error appearing for the first time on the face of the circuit court's final order was preserved for appellate review without the filing of a motion for rehearing or other appropriate motion.

HOLDINGS

1. When a court's error appears for the first time on the face of a final order, the party must alert the trial court to the error through a motion for rehearing or another appropriate motion in order to preserve the issue for appellate review.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“[W]hen an error appears for the first time on the face of the order, it is well settled that parties can preserve the issue by filing a motion for rehearing.”

“[W]here an error by the court appears for the first time on the face of a final order, a party must alert the court of the error via a motion for rehearing or some other appropriate motion in order to preserve it for appeal.”

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The opinion provides no substantive factual discussion concerning the underlying dispute. It identifies the appeal as arising from the Polk County Circuit Court and resolves the appeal by applying a preservation-of-error rule concerning an error appearing for the first time on the face of a final order.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Common Wealth Trust Services appealed from the Polk County Circuit Court. The Sixth District Court of Appeal affirmed without discussing the underlying merits in detail, citing Florida preservation-of-error authority.
