

SUPREME COURT OF ALASKA

In re C.R.H.

29 P.3d 849 (Alaska 2001) · Decided August 31, 2001

SUMMARY

The Alaska Supreme Court held that subsection 1911(b) of the Indian Child Welfare Act authorizes transfer of qualifying child-custody proceedings to federally recognized tribal courts in Alaska, regardless of Public Law 280. The court overruled prior Alaska decisions to the extent they were inconsistent with that holding and remanded for consideration of whether good cause existed to deny transfer to the Native Village of Nikolai tribal court.

CASE DETAILS

COURT	Supreme Court of Alaska
WRITING FOR THE COURT	Chief Justice Fabe; Bryner; Carpeneti; Eastaugh; Fabe; Matthews
JURISDICTION	Alaska
DECIDED	August 31, 2001
DISPOSITION	reversed_and_remanded
PROCEDURAL POSTURE	The Native Village of Nikolai appealed the superior court's denial of its motion to transfer an Indian Child Welfare Act custody proceeding to the Nikolai tribal court. The superior court entered final judgment under Alaska Civil Rule 54(b) for purposes of the appeal while retaining jurisdiction over the remainder of the case.
STANDARD OF REVIEW	Independent judgment, because the parties did not dispute any legally relevant facts and the questions presented were solely questions of law.
PRECEDENTIAL VALUE	published precedential opinion
PARTIES	Native Village of Nikolai v. State of Alaska, Department of Health & Social Services

TOPICS

- indian child welfare act
- tribal jurisdiction
- statutory interpretation
- appellate procedure
- standard of review

PRACTICE AREAS

- Indian Child Welfare Act
- tribal jurisdiction
- family law
- appellate procedure
- statutory interpretation

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether subsection 1911(b) of the Indian Child Welfare Act authorizes transfer of a state-court foster-care or parental-rights proceeding to a federally recognized Alaska Native tribal court notwithstanding Public Law 280.
2. Whether the superior court properly denied transfer without determining whether good cause existed to retain the proceeding in state court.

HOLDINGS

1. ICWA subsection 1911(b) authorizes state-court transfer jurisdiction to federally recognized tribal courts regardless of whether or how Public Law 280 otherwise affects tribal jurisdiction.
2. Because the superior court denied transfer on the erroneous ground that Nikolai could not claim subsection 1911(b) jurisdiction, the case must be remanded for the superior court to determine whether good cause exists to deny transfer; absent good cause, transfer is appropriate.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“Because we conclude that section 1911 authorizes transfer jurisdiction for federally recognized tribes in Alaska, we hold that tribes may accept transfer jurisdiction under this section of ICWA.” (at 849)

“Subsection 1911(b) therefore authorizes transfer to tribal courts regardless of whether or how P.L. 280 otherwise affects the tribes' jurisdiction.” (at 853)

“The good cause exception-like the comity analysis discussed in John v. Baker-is not an invitation for our courts to deny recognition to tribal [courts] based on paternalistic notions of proper procedure.” (at 854)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

C.R.H. was born in Anchorage in 1999; her mother belonged to the Native Village of Nikolai, her father belonged to the Native Village of Chickaloon, and she was eligible for membership in Nikolai. The State assumed emergency custody, and C.R.H. thereafter lived with maternal relatives in Nikolai. The parties agreed that Nikolai should be C.R.H.'s permanent home but disputed whether the placement should be finalized through state or tribal jurisdiction.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Alaska Department of Health and Social Services assumed emergency custody of C.R.H. and filed a child-in-need-of-aid proceeding. After the Chickaloon Village Traditional Council initially moved to intervene, the Native Village of Nikolai intervened as the child's ICWA tribe and moved to transfer the proceeding to its tribal court. The superior court denied transfer based on the Alaska Supreme Court's prior Native Village of Nenana line of cases, and Nikolai appealed.

DISPOSITION

reversed_and_remanded

REMAND INSTRUCTIONS

The superior court must determine whether good cause exists to deny transfer to the Nikolai tribal court. If no such cause exists, the proceeding must be transferred to the Nikolai tribal court under ICWA subsection 1911(b).

CASES CITED

- Native Village of Nenana v. State, Department of Health & Social Services, 722 P.2d 219 (Alaska 1986)
- In re F.P., 843 P.2d 1214 (Alaska 1992)
- In re K.E., 744 P.2d 1173 (Alaska 1987)
- John v. Baker, 982 P.2d 738 (Alaska 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1182 (2000)
- Iowa Mutual Insurance Co. v. LaPlante, 480 U.S. 9, 18 (1987)
- Merrion v. Jicarilla Apache Tribe, 455 U.S. 130, 149 (1982)
- Temple v. Denali Princess Lodge, 21 P.3d 813, 815 (Alaska 2001)
- Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians v. Holyfield, 490 U.S. 30, 36 (1989)
- Piper Aircraft Co. v. Reyno, 454 U.S. 235, 254 n.22 (1981)
- In re Union Carbide Corp. Gas Plant Disaster at Bhopal, India in Dec., 1984, 809 F.2d 195 (2d Cir. 1987)
- C.L. v. P.C.S., 17 P.3d 769, 776 (Alaska 2001)
- In re Adoption of F.H., 851 P.2d 1361, 1364 (Alaska 1993)
- In re Armell, 194 Ill. App. 3d 31, 141 Ill. Dec. 14, 550 N.E.2d 1060, 1065 (Ill. App. Ct. 1990)
- Yavapai-Apache Tribe v. Mejia, 906 S.W.2d 152, 170 (Tex. App. 1995)
- In re Appeal in Maricopa County Juvenile Action No. JS-8287, 171 Ariz. 104, 828 P.2d 1245, 1251 (Ariz. App. 1991)
- In re Robert T., 200 Cal. App. 3d 657, 246 Cal. Rptr. 168, 174-75 (Cal. Ct. App. 1988)

OPINION

FABE, J.

OPINION FABE, Chief Justice. I. INTRODUCTION Under subsection 1911(b) of the Indian Child Welfare Act¹ (ICWA), state courts must transfer certain child custody cases to tribal courts unless either the parents or tribe object, or there exists good cause to decline transfer. Following our decisions in Native Village of Nenana v. State, Department of Health & Social Services and subsequent cases, however, Alaska Native Villages have been precluded from accepting jurisdiction over ICWA cases.² Neither Nenana nor later cases affirming it included analysis of the language and structure of ICWA's transfer provisions in section 1911.

Because we conclude that section 1911 authorizes transfer jurisdiction for federally recognized tribes in Alaska, we hold that tribes may accept transfer jurisdiction under this section of ICWA. We overrule Nenana and subsequent decisions affirming its holding to the extent that those cases are inconsistent with today's decision. II FACTS AND PROCEEDINGS C.R.H. was born in Anchorage on June 27, 1999.

Her mother is a member of the Native Village of Nikolai, and her father is a member of the Native Village of Chickaloon; C.R.H. is eligible for membership in Nikolai. The State, Department of Health and Social Services (DHSS) assumed emergency custody of C.R.H. on June 80, 1999, and she has not been in her parents' custody since that time. - She currently lives with maternal relatives in Nikolai.

The parties to this appeal agree that this should be C.R.H.'s permanent home, but disagree about the appropriate legal mechanism for finalizing the placement. DHSS filed for determination that C.R.H. was a child in need of aid and for C.R.H.'s temporary placement on June 30, 1999.

The superior court held a number of probable cause hearings beginning on July 2, 1999. After the first probable cause hearing, the superior court found temporary probable cause and ordered DHSS to take temporary custody pending a second hearing. At the second hearing, on July 7, the Chickaloon Village Traditional Council moved to intervene as the child's tribe under ICWA and requested that the case be transferred to the tribal court.

At the third hearing, on July 12, the parties stipulated to temporary legal custody with DHSS, Division of Family and Youth Services (DFYS), pending legal resolution of the intervention and jurisdiction questions in this case.

The parties also later stipulated that C.R.H. was a child in need of aid. *851On August 3, 1999, the Native Village of Nikolai, represented by the Tanana Chiefs Conference, filed its first motion to intervene. During the hearing, a Tanana Chiefs attorney informed the superior court that the Villages of Chickaloon and Nikolai had agreed that Nikolai would act as C.R.H.'s tribe for ICWA purposes; Chickaloon requested that its own motions be held in abeyance in favor of Nikolai's.

The court granted Nikolai's motion to intervene under ICWA and its motion for determination that Nikolai was C.R.H.'s ICWA tribe. Nikolai then moved to transfer jurisdiction to the Nikolai tribal court. The State argued in opposition that under the Nenana line of cases, Public Law 2803 (P.L. 280) barred Nikolai from asserting jurisdiction over an ICWA case unless Nikolai had reassumed Jurisdiction to adjudicate ICWA cases under 25 U.S.C. § 1918.

The State's brief stated that "(although the Department wishes this were not the law in this state, it is constrained, as is [the superior] court, to follow [the Nenana line of cases] until the Alaska Supreme Court overrules these decisions."

The superior court denied Nikolai's transfer motion. It directed entry of final judgment for purposes of appeal under Alaska Civil Rule 54(b), while retaining jurisdiction over the rest of the case. Nikolai brings this appeal, which is limited to the tribal court transfer issue. III. STANDARD OF REVIEW The parties do not dispute any legally relevant facts.

The questions presented are solely questions of law, to which we apply our independent judgment.⁴ IV. DISCUSSION Federally recognized tribes, including the Native Village of Nikolai,⁵ retain their sovereign powers unless Congress specifically withdraws their authority.⁶ Under P.L. 280, Congress extended Alaska state courts' jurisdiction to "all Indian country" within Alaska.⁷ This court interpreted *852P.L.

280 in Native Village of Nenana, holding that through that law Congress effectively divested tribal jurisdiction and granted the state "exclusive jurisdiction over matters involving the custody of Indian children.⁸ State jurisdiction remained exclusive, we held, unless a tribe governed by P.L. 280 successfully petitioned to reassume custody under ICWA section 1911.⁹ Nikolai urges us to reconsider Nena-nma's interpretation of P.L.

280, and to hold that the Alaska Native tribes affected by P.L. 280 retain jurisdiction concurrent with that of the state. We need not reach this issue, however, because the jurisdiction claimed by Nikolai exists regardless of P.L. 280: Subsection 1911(b) tribal transfer jurisdiction over ICWA custody cases was expressly approved by Congress in enacting ICWA.

The language and structure of section 1911 reflect congressional intent that all tribes, regardless of their P.L. 280 status, be able to accept transfer jurisdiction of ICWA cases from state courts. We therefore hold that Nikolai may assume jurisdiction over this case under ICWA's subsection 1911(b) transfer provision.

To the extent that Nenana,¹⁰ F.P.,¹¹ and K.E.¹² are inconsistent with this decision, those cases are overruled.¹³ ICWA section 1911 reads in critical part: (a) Exclusive jurisdiction An Indian tribe shall have jurisdiction exclusive as to any State over any child custody proceeding involving an Indian child who resides or is domiciled within the reservation of such tribe, except where such jurisdiction is otherwise vested in the State by existing Federal law.

Where an Indian child is a ward of a tribal court, the Indian tribe shall retain exclusive jurisdiction, notwithstanding the residence or domicile of the child. (b) Transfer of proceedings; declination by tribal court In any State court proceeding for the foster care placement of, or termination of parental rights to, an Indian child not domiciled or residing within the reservation of the Indian child's tribe, the court, in the absence of good cause to the contrary, shall transfer such proceeding to the jurisdiction of the tribe, absent objection by either parent, upon the petition of either parent or the Indian custodian or the Indian child's tribe: Provided, That such transfer shall be subject to declination by the tribal court of such tribe.¹⁴ - As the above language makes clear, Congress intended P.L.

280 to affect tribes' exclusive jurisdiction - under - subsection 1911(a), but did not intend P.L. 280 to affect transfer - jurisdiction - under - subsection 1911(b). Subsection 1911(a) grants tribes exclusive jurisdiction over cases involving children who reside on reservations "except where such jurisdiction is otherwise vested in the State by existing Federal law " such as *853P.L., 280.15 With this qualifying language, Congress recognized P.L.

280 as a limitation on exclusive tribal jurisdiction. By contrast, in subsection 1911(b), Congress did not articulate a P.L. 280 exception to tribal transfer Jurisdiction. Rather, it provided that "in any State court proceeding... the court, in the absence of good cause to the contrary, shall transfer such proceeding to the jurisdiction of the tribe." 16 Subsection 1911(b) therefore authorizes transfer to tribal courts regardless of whether or how P.L.

280 otherwise affects the tribes' jurisdiction.¹⁷ ICWA subsection 1911(b) creates three checks on tribal transfer jurisdiction: State courts should retain jurisdiction if either parent objects to the tribe hearing the case, if the tribe declines jurisdiction, or if the court finds good cause to deny transfer. Congress intended that state courts apply the good cause exception using a "modified doctrine of forum non conveniens... to insure that the rights of the child as an Indian, the Indian parents or custodian, and the tribe are fully protected."¹⁸ The Bureau of Indian Affairs provides further guidelines regarding the good cause exception.¹⁹ These guidelines are not binding, and we have departed from them in the past.²⁰ Under the guidelines, state courts should deny transfer if the tribe does not have a court as defined by the Act.²¹ The guidelines also specify the circumstances in which a state may wish to deny transfer.

These include cases in which state proceedings are well advanced before tribes petition for transfer; cases in which a teenaged child who is the subject of the proceedings objects to the transfer; cases in which necessary evidence could not be presented to the tribal court without undue hardship to parties or witnesses; and cases in which a child over five years of age has had little contact with the tribe and the child's parents are unavailable.²² The guide*854lines place the burden of establishing good cause to deny transfer jurisdiction on the party opposing the transfer.²³ The, good cause exception-like the comity analysis discussed in John v. Baker-"is not an invitation for our courts to deny recognition to tribal [courts] based on paternalistic notions of proper procedure....

[S]uperior courts should strive to respect the cultural differences that influence tribal jurisprudence, as well as to recognize the practical limits experienced by smaller court systems.²⁴ Because the superior court concluded that Nikolai could not claim subsection 1911(b) transfer jurisdiction, it did not carry out an analysis of good cause.

On remand, the superior court should inquire whether good cause exists to deny transfer to Nikolai. If no such cause exists, then transfer to the tribal court is appropriate under ICWA subsection 1911(b). V. CONCLUSION We conclude that ICWA - subsection 1911(b) authorizes transfer of jurisdiction to tribal courts regardless of P.L. 280.

To the extent that Nenana,²⁵ F.P.,²⁶ and *K.E.*²⁷ are inconsistent with this conclusion, those cases are overruled. We REMAND this case for transfer to the Nikolai tribal court unless the superior court finds good cause to deny transfer.. 25 U.S.C. §§ 1901-1963 (2000).. 722 P.2d 219 (Alaska 1986); In re F.P., 843 P.2d 1214 (Alaska 1992); In re K.E., 744 P.2d 1173 (Alaska 1987)..

Act of August 15, 1953, Pub.L. 83-280, 67 Stat. 588, 589 (codified as amended at 18 U.S.C. § 1162, 25 U.S.C §§ 1321-26, 28 U.S.C. § 1360).. See Temple v. Denali Princess Lodge, 21 P.3d 813, 815 (Alaska 2001).. We follow the U.S. Congress's determination that Alaska Native tribes are sovereign powers under federal law. See John v. Baker, 982 P.2d 738, 749 (Alaska 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1182, 120 S.Ct.

1221, 145 LEd.2d 1121 (2000). In Jolin, we affirmed the Native Village of North-way's sovereignty based on the village's inclusion in the Department of the Interior's 1993 tribe list and the 1994 Tribe List Act. See id. at 750. Like Northway Village, Nikolai Village is on the Department of the Interior's 1993 tribe list, see Indian Entities Recognized and Eligible to Receive Services from the United States Bureau of Indian Affairs, 58 Fed.Reg.

54,364, 54,369 (1993), and on every tribe list since issued by that Department. See Indian Entities Recognized and Eligible to Receive Services from the United States Bureau of Indian Affairs, 60 Fed.Reg. 9250, 9255 (1995); Indian Entities Recognized and Eligible to Receive Services from the United States Bureau of Indian Affairs, 61 Fed.Reg. 58,211, 58,215 (1996); Indian Entities Recognized and Eligible to Receive Services from the United States Bureau of Indian Affairs, 62 Fed.Reg.

55,270, 55,275 (1997); Indian Entities Recognized and Eligible to Receive Services from the United States Bureau of Indian Affairs, 63 Fed.Reg. 71,941, 71,945 (1998); Indian Entities Recognized and Eligible to Receive Services from the United States Bureau of Indian Affairs, 65 Fed.Reg. 13,298, 13,302 (2000).

In the Tribe List Act, Congress recognizes as an Indian tribe "any Indian or Alaska Native tribe, band, nation, pueblo, village or community that the Secretary of the Interior acknowledges to exist as an Indian tribe." 25 U.S.C. § 479a(2) (2000)". See John, 982 P.2d at 751; see also Iowa Mutual Ins. Co. v. LaPlante, 480 U.S. 9, 18, 107 S.Ct. 971, 94 LEd.2d 10 (1987); Merrion v. Jicarilla Apache Tribe, 455 U.S. 130, 149, 102 S.Ct.

894, 71 LEd.2d 21 (1982).. 28 U.S.C. § 1360(a) provides: Each of the States listed in the following table shall have jurisdiction over civil causes of action between Indians or to which Indians are parties which arise in the areas of Indian country listed opposite the name of the State to the same extent that such State has jurisdiction over other civil causes of action, and those civil laws of such State that are of general application to private persons or private property shall have the same force and effect within such Indian country as they have elsewhere within the State: State of Indian country affected Alaska All Indian country within the State..

722 P.2d 219, 221 (Alaska 1986).. Id. at 221. In John, we noted that P.L. 280 does not apply to those Alaska Native tribes that do not occupy Indian country. 982 P.2d at 748.. Native Village of Nenana v. State, Dep't of Health & Soc. Servs., 722 P.2d 219 (Alaska 1986).. - In re F.P., 843 P.2d 1214 (Alaska 1992)..

In re K.E., 744 P.2d 1173 (Alaska 1987).. Nenana based its analysis primarily on the language of ICWA section 1918. See 722 P.2d at 221-22. As the discussion above makes clear, we now find that section 1911 and not section 1918 controls this legal question.. 25 U.S.C. § 1911. provides: The remainder of § 1911 (c) State court proceedings; intervention In any State court proceeding for the foster care placement of, or termination of parental rights to, an Indian child, the Indian custodian of the child and the Indian child's tribe shall have a right to intervene at any point in the proceeding. (d) Full faith and credit to public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of Indian tribes The United States, every State, every territory or possession of the United States, and every Indian tribe shall give full faith and credit to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of any Indian tribe applicable to Indian child custody proceedings to the same extent that such entities give full faith and credit to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of any other entity..

25 U.S.C. § 1911(a) (emphasis added).. 25 U.S.C. § 1911(b) (emphasis added). As the United States Supreme Court has noted, ICWA subsection 1911(b) "creates concurrent but presumptively tribal jurisdiction" over proceedings involving children not domiciled on reservations. Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians v. Holyfield, 490 U.S. 30, 36, 109 S.Ct. 1597, 104 L.Ed.2d 29 (1989) (emphasis added).

By mandating that state courts "shall," absent good cause to deny transfer or objection by a parent or the tribe, transfer jurisdiction to tribal courts, Congress created a strong presumption in favor of transfer. See 25 U.S.C. § 1911(b)..

We find the language of section 1911 to be clear. However, if it were ambiguous, the result reached above would still be mandated by the constructive canon that "[c]ourts must resolve ambiguities in statutes affecting the rights of Native Americans in favor of Native Americans." John v. Baker, 982 P.2d 738, 752 (Alaska 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1182, 120 S.Ct.

1221, 145 L.Ed.2d 1121 (2000).. H.R.Rep. No. 95-1386, at 8 (1978), reprinted in 1978 U.S.C.C.A.N. 7530, 7544. For discussion of forum non conveniens factors, including private interests of the litigants, public interests of the forum state, and the existence of an adequate alternative forum for dispute resolution, see Piper Aircraft Co. v. Reyno, 454 U.S. 235, 254 n. 22, 102 S.Ct.

252, 70 L.Ed.2d 419 (1981), and In re Union Carbide Corp. Gas Plant Disaster at Bhopal, India in Dec., 1984, 809 F.2d 195 (2d Cir.1987).. Bureau of Indian Affairs, U.S. Dep't of the Interior, Guidelines for State Courts, Child Custody Proceedings, 44 Fed.Reg. 67,584 (1979).. See C.L. v. P.C.S., 17 P.3d 769, 776 (Alaska 2001); In re Adoption of F.H., 851 P.2d 1361, 1364 (Alaska 1993)..

See 44 Fed.Reg. at 67,591.. The Bureau of Indian Affairs guidelines provide, in part: (a) Good cause not to transfer the proceeding exists if the Indian child's tribe does not have a tribal court as defined by the Act to which the case can be transferred. (b) Good cause not to transfer the proceeding may exist if any of the following circumstances exists: (i) The proceeding was at an advanced stage when the petition to transfer was received and the petitioner did not file the petition promptly after receiving notice of the hearing. ii) The Indian child is over twelve years of age and objects to the transfer. (iii) The evidence necessary to decide the case could not be adequately presented in the tribal court without undue hardship to the parties or the witnesses. (iv) The parents of a child over five years of age are not available and the child has had little or no contact with the child's tribe or members of the child's tribe.

44 Fed.Reg. at 67,591.. "The burden of establishing good cause to the contrary shall be on the party opposing the transfer." 44 Fed.Reg. at 67,591.. John, 982 P.2d at 763 (internal citation omitted); see also BIA guidelines, 44 Fed.Reg. at 67,591 ("Socio-economic conditions and the perceived adequacy of tribal or Bureau of Indian Affairs social services or judicial systems may not be considered in a determination that good cause exists.").

We note that state courts are split on the question whether good cause analysis for denying section 1911 transfer jurisdiction should include substantive considerations of the best interests of the child. Because the facts of this case do not require us to decide this issue, we do not address it. Compare In re Armell, 194 TIL. App.3d 31, 141 Ill.Dec. 14, 550 N.E.2d 1060, 1065 (1990) (best interests of child are not relevant to subsection 1911(b) good cause determination}, and Yavapai-Apache Tribe v. Mejia, 906 S.W.2d 152, 170 (Tex.App.1995) (same), with In re Appeal in Maricopa County Juvenile Action No. JS-8287, 171 Ariz. 104, 828 P.2d 1245, 1251 (Ariz.

App.1991) (best interests of child are relevant to subsection 1911(b) good cause determination), and In re Robert T., 200 Cal.App.3d 657, 246 Cal.Rptr. 168, 174-75 (1988) (same).. Native Village of Nenana v. State, Dep't of Health & Soc. Servs., 722 P.2d 219 (Alaska 1986)..

In re F.P., 843 P.2d 1214 (Alaska 1992).. In re K.E., 744 P.2d 1173 (Alaska 1987).