QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the reporter's record should be filed without requiring appellant to pay the reporter's fee after the trial court found appellant indigent.
2. What deadline should govern the filing of the overdue reporter's record.

HOLDINGS

1. After the trial court found appellant indigent and appointed counsel, the reporter's record was due to be filed without requiring appellant to pay the reporter's fee.
2. The reporter's record was ordered to be filed no later than September 26, 2014; absent extenuating circumstances, no further extensions would be granted.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The court reporter filed a second notice that the reporter's record was late and contended that appellant was not entitled to appeal without paying the reporter's fee. The trial court found appellant indigent and appointed counsel. The appellate court then notified the reporter of appellant's indigency and set a deadline for filing the reporter's record.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Court reporter Debra Doolittle filed a second notice of late record, asserting that appellant was not entitled to appeal without paying the fee. The trial court subsequently found appellant indigent and appointed counsel, and the appellate clerk notified the court reporter of that determination. The appellate court ordered that the reporter's record be filed by September 26, 2014, absent extenuating circumstances, and stated that no further extensions would be granted absent such circumstances.
