Maalona Junior Laki Seutafili v. United States Citizenship and Immigration Services, No. 2:25-cv-00942-DBB-JCB (D. Utah June 4, 2026) · No. 2:25-cv-00942-DBB-JCB · Decided June 4, 2026

SUMMARY

The United States District Court for the District of Utah granted defendants’ motion to dismiss Maalona Junior Laki Seutafili’s claims for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction. The court held that 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(B)(i), as interpreted by Patel v. Garland, barred review of USCIS’s denial of his I-485 adjustment-of-status application, and that § 1252(g) barred review of the decision to issue a notice to appear and commence removal proceedings. The court dismissed the claims under Rule 12(b)(1).

WRITING FOR THE COURT	David Barlow
JURISDICTION	United States District Court for the District of Utah
DECIDED	June 4, 2026
DOCKET	2:25-cv-00942-DBB-JCB
DISPOSITION	dismissed
PROCEDURAL POSTURE	Defendants moved under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1) to dismiss an action seeking APA and declaratory relief concerning denial of an I-485 adjustment-of-status application, issuance of a notice to appear, and denial of a motion to reconsider. The district court granted the motion and dismissed for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction.
STANDARD OF REVIEW	On a Rule 12(b)(1) motion, jurisdiction is determined from the factual allegations in the complaint, without regard to conclusory jurisdictional allegations, and the party invoking federal jurisdiction bears the burden of proof. A court lacking subject-matter jurisdiction must dismiss the action whenever the lack of jurisdiction becomes apparent.

PRACTICE AREAS

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(B)(i) strips a federal district court of jurisdiction to review USCIS's denial of an application for adjustment of status under 8 U.S.C. § 1255.
2. Whether 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(D) preserves district-court jurisdiction over constitutional claims or questions of law concerning the adjustment-of-status denial.
3. Whether 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g) strips jurisdiction over claims arising from USCIS's decision to issue a notice to appear and commence removal proceedings.

HOLDINGS

1. 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(B)(i), as interpreted by Patel v. Garland, precludes district-court judicial review of USCIS's denial of an application for adjustment of status under 8 U.S.C. § 1255, including where the challenge concerns the legal basis for the denial rather than merely a discretionary or factual determination.
2. 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g) precludes district-court jurisdiction over claims arising from USCIS's decision to issue a notice to appear and commence removal proceedings.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“Therefore, § 1252(a)(2)(B)(i) and Patel preclude judicial review of USCIS’s denial of Mr. Seutafili’s I-485 application.”

“Thus, the decision to issue an NTA and commence removal proceedings for Mr. Seutafili is not subject to review under § 1252(g), and the court lacks jurisdiction to hear any claims arising from that decision.”

“Therefore, the court lacks subject-matter jurisdiction to review Mr. Seutafili’s claims.”

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Seutafili, a Samoan citizen married to a United States citizen, filed an I-485 application for adjustment of status based on an I-130 petition in August 2023. USCIS issued a notice of intent to deny and then denied the I-485 application based in part on a Utah drug-paraphernalia conviction that USCIS deemed disqualifying under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(2)(A)(i)(II). After USCIS denied his motions concerning the application, it issued and filed a notice to appear in November 2025, thereby commencing removal proceedings and divesting USCIS of jurisdiction over the adjustment application.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Seutafili filed an amended complaint after USCIS denied his I-485 application and later issued a notice to appear commencing removal proceedings. He sought declarations that the agency actions were arbitrary and capricious and orders compelling approval of his application and withdrawal or termination of the notice to appear. Defendants moved to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, and the court granted the motion.

MAALONA JUNIOR LAKI SEUTAFILI, MEMORANDUM DECISION AND ORDER GRANTING [33]

Plaintiff, DEFENDANTS’ MOTION TO DISMISS v. Case No. 2:25-cv-00942-DBB-JCB UNITED STATES CITIZENSHIP and District Judge David Barlow IMMIGRATION SERVICES, et al., Defendants. Before the Court is Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss¹ for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction.

BACKGROUND

This case arises from Plaintiff Maalona Junior Laki Seutafili’s claims that the United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (“USCIS”) improperly denied his application for permanent residency and commenced removal proceedings.² He alleges the following: Mr. Seutafili is a Samoan citizen who is married to a United States citizen.³ In August 2023, he filed an I-485 application to adjust his residency status based on an accompanying I-130 petition filed by his wife.⁴ On April 3, 2025, USCIS issued a Notice of Intent to Deny (“NOID”) Plaintiff’s application.⁵ This NOID was based at least in part on USCIS’s assertion that Mr. 1 Motion to Dismiss (“MTD”), ECF No. 33, filed Apr. 13, 2026. 2 Amended Compl. ¶¶ 1–2, ECF No. 5, filed Nov. 14, 2025. 3 Id. ¶ 17. 4 Id. ¶¶ 17, 42, 44. 5 Id. ¶ 42. Seutafili was inadmissible for status adjustment under § 212(a)(2)(A)(i)(II) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (“INA”) due to a 2010 Utah conviction for drug paraphernalia.⁶ Plaintiff responded to the NOID by arguing that USCIS had failed to apply relevant Supreme Court precedent holding that a conviction like his did not make him inadmissible under § 212(a)(2)(A)(i)(II).⁷ Nevertheless, USCIS denied Mr. Seutafili’s I-485 application on May 23, 2025, on the grounds that his 2010 paraphernalia conviction triggered § 212(a)(2)(A)(i)(II).⁸ In June 2025, Plaintiff filed a motion to reconsider, but USCIS interpreted it as a motion to reopen and denied it on the grounds that it failed to present new material evidence without considering its merits.⁹ On September 19, 2025, Mr. Seutafili filed a second I-290B motion to reconsider.¹⁰ On October 28, 2025, Defendants were served with a copy of the initial complaint in this case.¹¹ Around one week later, on November 5, 2025, USCIS issued a Notice to Appear (“NTA”) and filed it with the Executive Office for Immigration Review (“EOIR”), divesting USCIS of jurisdiction over the case.¹² That same day, USCIS denied Plaintiff’s second I-290B motion on the grounds that USCIS lacked jurisdiction because an NTA had been issued.¹³ Mr. Seutafili asks the court to (1) declare that USCIS’s denial of his I-485 was arbitrary and capricious, (2) compel Defendants to approve his I-485 application for permanent residency,

(3) declare that the filing of NTA and subsequent denial of his second I-290B motion were arbitrary and capricious, and (4) compel Defendants to withdraw or terminate the NTA and stay 6 Id. 7 Id. ¶ 43. 8 Id. ¶ 45. 9 Id. ¶ 46. 10 Id. 11 Id. ¶ 47. 12 Id. 13 Id. removal proceedings until this action is decided.¹⁴ Defendants argue that Plaintiffs claims must be dismissed because the court lacks subject-matter jurisdiction.¹⁵

STANDARD

Rule 12(b)(1) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure governs dismissal for “lack of subject-matter jurisdiction.”¹⁶ “A Rule 12(b)(1) motion to dismiss ‘must be determined from the allegations of fact in the complaint, without regard to mere conclusory allegations of jurisdiction.”¹⁷ “[T]he party invoking the federal court’s jurisdiction bears the burden of proof.”¹⁸ A court lacking subject-matter jurisdiction “must dismiss the cause at any stage of the proceedings in which it becomes apparent that jurisdiction is lacking.”¹⁹

DISCUSSION

The Amended Complaint states that this case arises under the Administrative Procedure Act (“APA”), and that this court has federal question subject-matter jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1331 and can grant relief under the APA and the Declaratory Judgment Act.²⁰ “[T]he Declaratory Judgment Act ‘does not confer jurisdiction upon federal courts, so the power to issue declaratory judgments must lie in some independent basis of jurisdiction.’”²¹ And § 1331 gives district courts “original jurisdiction of all civil actions arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States,”²² but it does not waive sovereign immunity so as to provide 14 Id. ¶¶ 1–2. 15 MTD 1. 16 Fed. I-485 Application Denial Defendants first argue that the INA specifically precludes judicial review of adjustment of status decisions.³⁰ Under 8 U.S.C. § 1255(a), the status of an alien who meets certain requirements may be adjusted to that of a lawful permanent resident at the discretion of the 23 Merida Delgado v. Gonzales, 428 F.3d 916, 919 (10th Cir. 2005) (“We first reject Mr. Delgado’s claims that the Constitution and 28 U.S.C. § 1331 waive sovereign immunity. Attorney General.³¹ This provision provides the basis for the status adjustment Mr. Seutafili requested through his I-485 application.³² But a separate provision in § 1252(a)(2)(B)(i) states: Notwithstanding any other provision of law (statutory or nonstatutory) . . . and regardless of whether the judgment, decision, or action is made in removal proceedings, no court shall have jurisdiction to review-- (i) any judgment regarding the granting of relief under section . . . 1255 of this title . . .³³ The Supreme Court clarified in Patel v. Garland that § 1252(a)(2)(B)(i) “does not restrict itself to certain kinds of decisions. Rather, it prohibits review of any judgment regarding the granting of relief under § 1255 and the other enumerated provisions.”³⁴ In the context of § 1252(a)(2)(B)(i), the phrase any judgment “means that the provision applies to judgments of whatever kind under § 1255, not just discretionary judgments or the last-in-time judgment.”³⁵ Therefore, § 1252(a)(2)(B)(i) and Patel preclude judicial review of USCIS’s denial of Mr. Seutafili’s I-485 application.³⁶ Plaintiff responds that this case presents a straightforward question of law, whether his prior conviction renders him inadmissible under the INA.³⁷ He argues that jurisdiction is thus preserved under § 1252(a)(2)(D),³⁸ which states: Nothing in subparagraph (B) or (C), or in any other provision of this chapter (other than this section) which limits or eliminates judicial review, shall be construed as precluding review of constitutional claims or questions of law raised upon a petition 31 8 U.S.C.A. § 1255(a). 32 Amended Compl. ¶¶ 5, 27. 33 8 U.S.C.A. § 1252(a)(2)(B)(i). 34 Patel v. Garland, 596 U.S. 328, 338 (2022). 35 Id. (cleaned up). 36 Other courts in this district have reached the same conclusion on similar facts. See Chaudhari v. Mayorkas, No. 2:22-CV-00047-RJS-CMR, 2023 WL 1822000, at *7 (D. Utah Feb. 8, 2023) (dismissing the case for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction under § 1252(a)(2)(B)(i) where a plaintiff’s I-485 application was denied and that denial was challenged in district court); Cherdchaweebusaba v. United States Dep’t of State, No. 1:24-CV-00173-AMA- JCB, 2026 WL 412426, at *4 (D. Utah Feb. 13, 2026) (same). 37 Opposition to Motion to Dismiss (“Opp’n”) 3, ECF No. 34, filed Apr. 26, 2026. 38 Id. for review filed with an appropriate court of appeals in accordance with this section.³⁹ While § 1252(a)(2)(D) preserves judicial review for constitutional claims or questions of law, this jurisdiction is expressly limited to “an appropriate court of appeals.”⁴⁰ The Tenth Circuit in Green v. Napolitano specifically held that “§ 1252(a)(2)(D) does not apply in the district courts.”⁴¹ Any § 1252(a)(2)(D) challenge to a § 1255 status adjustment denial “must be filed in the appropriate circuit court, not a district court,”⁴² regardless of whether the relevant issue is a question of law. Mr. Seutafili also contends that § 1252(a)(2)(B)(i) does not bar review because he does not challenge a discretionary decision.⁴³ This argument was foreclosed by the Supreme Court in Patel.⁴⁴ Plaintiff’s additional contention that § 1252(a)(2)(B)(i) and Patel should only be read to eliminate judicial review of factual determinations rather than legal questions likewise fails.⁴⁵ He urges the court to read § 1252(a)(2)(B) “in harmony with § 1252(a)(2)(D), which expressly preserves jurisdiction over questions of law.”⁴⁶ But, as already discussed, the § 1252(a)(2)(D) carveout only permits review “in the appropriate circuit court, not a district court.”⁴⁷ And the Supreme Court in Patel emphasized § 1252(a)(2)(B)(i)’s expansive scope.⁴⁸ Thus, the INA 39 8 U.S.C.A. § 1252(a)(2)(D). ⁴⁰ Id. ⁴¹ Green v. Napolitano, 627 F.3d 1341, 1347 (10th Cir. 2010). ⁴² Id.; see also Cherdchaweebusaba, 2026 WL 412426 at *3. ⁴³ Opp’n 4–6. ⁴⁴ Patel v. Garland, 596 U.S. 328, 338 (2022) (holding that § 1252(a)(2)(B)(i) “applies to judgments of whatever kind under § 1255, not just discretionary judgments or the last-in-time judgment.”). ⁴⁵ See Opp’n 6. ⁴⁶ Id. ⁴⁷ Green, 627 F.3d at 1347. ⁴⁸ Patel, 596 U.S. at 338. precludes judicial review of USCIS’s denial of Mr. Seutafili’s I-485 application, so the court lacks jurisdiction under the APA to review that portion of Plaintiff’s claims.⁴⁹ II. Notice to Appear Defendants next argue that the INA precludes courts from reviewing decisions to commence proceedings.⁵⁰ A separate jurisdiction-stripping provision in the INA states: Except as provided in this section and notwithstanding any other provision of law (statutory or nonstatutory) . . . no court shall have jurisdiction to hear any cause or claim by or on behalf of any alien arising from the decision or action by the Attorney General to commence proceedings, adjudicate cases, or execute removal orders against any alien under this chapter.⁵¹ This provision in § 1252(g) “applies to three discrete actions that the Attorney General may take: her ‘decision or action’ to ‘commence proceedings, adjudicate cases, or execute removal orders.’”⁵² In the context of the INA, proceedings are commenced by serving a notice to appear.⁵³ And, for the same reasons discussed above, the §1252(a)(2)(D) carveout does not grant this court jurisdiction to hear Mr. Seutafili’s constitutional due process claims related to the NTA. Thus, the decision to issue an NTA and commence removal proceedings for Mr. Seutafili is not subject to review under § 1252(g), and the court lacks jurisdiction to hear any claims arising from that decision.⁵⁴ ⁴⁹ Defendants also argue that the APA does not apply and the court lacks subject-matter jurisdiction because Plaintiff challenges a discretionary action and because the I-485 denial is not a final agency action. See MTD 7–8. Because § 1252(a)(2)(B)(i) already precludes subject-matter jurisdiction over the I-485 denial, the court need not address these arguments. ⁵⁰ MTD 10. ⁵¹ 8 U.S.C.A. § 1252(g). ⁵² Reno v. Am.-Arab Anti-Discrimination Comm., 525 U.S. 471 (1999) (emphasis in original). ⁵³ See Niz-Chavez v. Garland, 593 U.S. 155, 163 (2021) (“A notice to appear serves as the basis for commencing a grave legal proceeding.”); Miguel-Pena v. Garland, 94 F.4th 1145, 1150 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 145 S. Ct. 545, 220 L. Ed. 2d 204 (2024) (“While they were detained, DHS served them with NTAs, charging documents that commence removal proceedings.”). ⁵⁴ 8 U.S.C.A. § 1252(g). In sum, Mr. Seutafili asks this court to declare that USCIS’s denial of his I-485 application and its issuance of the NTA and subsequent denial of his I-290B motion were arbitrary and capricious under the APA.» He also asks the court to compel USCIS to grant the I- 485 application and withdraw its NTA.°° However, the APA explicitly states that it does not apply when “statutes preclude judicial review.”>’ In this case, the INA precludes district court judicial review of both the I-485 denial and the issuance of the NTA.°® Therefore, the court lacks subject-matter jurisdiction to review Mr. Seutafili’s claims.
