QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the sentence imposed after Greenlee's guilty plea was excessive.
2. Whether the Appellate Division should exercise its discretion in the interest of justice to reduce the sentence.

HOLDINGS

1. The sentence was excessive to the extent indicated, and the Appellate Division reduced the determinate prison term from nine years to seven years while leaving the five-year period of postrelease supervision unchanged.

KEY QUOTATIONS

*“ORDERED that the sentence is modified, as a matter of discretion in the interest of justice, by reducing the sentence imposed from a determinate term of imprisonment of nine years, to be followed by a period of postrelease supervision of five years, to a determinate term of imprisonment of seven years, to be followed by a period of postrelease supervision of five years; as so modified, the sentence is affirmed.” ([1])

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Greenlee was convicted of assault in the first degree upon his plea of guilty. The Supreme Court, Kings County, imposed a determinate nine-year term of imprisonment followed by five years of postrelease supervision.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Darrel Greenlee pleaded guilty to assault in the first degree in Supreme Court, Kings County. That court imposed a determinate nine-year prison term followed by five years of postrelease supervision. On appeal, the Appellate Division modified the sentence in the interest of justice by reducing the prison term to seven years and affirmed the sentence as modified.
