SUMMARY

The Iowa Court of Appeals affirmed summary judgment for Catholic Health Initiatives-Iowa Corp., doing business as MercyOne Des Moines Medical Center, and nurse Sariah Steed on Dennis Smith’s defamation claim. The court held that Steed’s characterization of Smith as “yelling” in his wife’s medical records was a non-actionable opinion or supportable interpretation of the encounter rather than an actionable statement of fact.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether Steed's descriptions of Smith as yelling in the medical records were actionable statements of fact or nonactionable opinions.
2. Whether defendants were entitled to summary judgment on Smith's defamation claim.

HOLDINGS

1. Steed's descriptions of Smith as yelling were nonactionable opinions rather than actionable statements of fact.
2. Defendants were entitled to judgment as a matter of law because the undisputed facts established that the challenged statements were not actionable.

KEY QUOTATIONS

"Opinion is absolutely protected under the first amendment." (3)

"We elect to follow the only on-point authority presented to us and affirm the district court's conclusion that Steed's statements were not actionable." (4)

"On these undisputed facts, the defendants were entitled to judgment as a matter of law." (4)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Smith's wife was receiving care from Catholic Health Initiatives-Iowa Corp., doing business as MercyOne Des Moines Medical Center. During an encounter involving nurse Sariah Steed's provision of nursing care, Steed recorded in the wife's medical records that Smith was yelling, continued to yell, and yelled at her. Smith disputed the characterization, asserting that he did not raise his voice, although he admitted that he was baited into a quarrel, cut the discussion short, called it the most idiotic discussion he had ever had, and became exasperated.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Smith filed suit in 2021 asserting tort claims personally and purportedly on behalf of his wife. The claims brought on behalf of his wife were dismissed as void because Smith engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. The district court granted defendants summary judgment on Smith's personal defamation claim, concluding that statements describing Smith as yelling were nonactionable opinions, denied Smith's motion to reconsider, and Smith appealed.

DISPOSITION

affirmed
