

SUPREME COURT OF LOUISIANA

State v. Cook

82 So. 3d 1239 (La. 2012) · No. 2011-K-2223 · Decided March 23, 2012

SUMMARY

The Supreme Court of Louisiana reversed part of the court of appeal's decision and reinstated the defendant's habitual-offender adjudication and sentence. The court held that the trial court adequately informed the defendant of the habitual-offender allegations and his right to contest them, and that any technical noncompliance with La. R.S. 15:529.1(D)(1)(a) was harmless.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

- Whether the trial court's failure to strictly comply with the requirements of La. Rev. Stat. § 15:529.1(D)(1)(a) rendered Cook's habitual-offender adjudication and sentence invalid.

2. Whether the record established that Cook was informed of the habitual-offender allegations and of his right to contest them before voluntarily stipulating.

HOLDINGS

1. The statutory requirements that the court inform a defendant of the allegations in a habitual-offender bill and of the right to contest their truth should not operate as technical traps; any technical noncompliance was harmless where the record demonstrated that the defendant was fully informed, consulted with counsel, voluntarily stipulated, and had his interests protected.
2. The trial court was entitled to rely on counsel's representations, made in Cook's presence, that she had explained the relevant rights and consequences, together with Cook's personal response and the hearing record, in finding that he knowingly and voluntarily stipulated to the habitual-offender allegations.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“The requirements of R.S. 15:529.1(D)(1)(a) that the court inform a defendant of the allegations in a habitual offender bill of information, and of his right “to be tried as to the truth thereof according to law,” should not serve as technical traps for an unwary but otherwise conscientious judge.” (1240)

“Defendant's interests were fully protected and any technical non-compliance with the statutory directives in R.S. 15:529.1(D)(1)(a) was harmless.” (1241)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

At the habitual-offender hearing, the trial court reappointed defense counsel after Cook had waived counsel during trial. Counsel represented in Cook's presence that she had reviewed the state's documentary proof of prior convictions with him, explained the consequences of a hearing versus stipulation, and discussed the matter extensively. After the state stated the allegations, introduced documentary proof, and advised that a fingerprint expert was available, Cook personally responded "No" when asked whether the defense had a response and stipulated to his habitual-offender status.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

At a habitual-offender hearing, Cook, after consulting with reappointed defense counsel, stipulated to the allegations in the habitual-offender bill. The trial court adjudicated and sentenced him as a habitual offender. The court of appeal reversed in part, and the Louisiana Supreme Court reversed that portion of the appellate decision and reinstated the trial court's adjudication and sentence.
