QUESTIONS PRESENTED

- Whether the appeal should be dismissed for want of prosecution because appellant failed to file an appellate brief after notice and an opportunity to seek an extension.

HOLDINGS

1. An appellate court may dismiss an appeal for want of prosecution when the appellant fails to file a required brief after receiving notice that the brief is overdue and an opportunity to request an extension; because appellant did not file the brief or respond to the notice, dismissal was warranted.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“We dismiss the appeal for want of prosecution for failure to file a brief.”

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Appellant Michael Scranton proceeded pro se in the appeal. He failed to file an appellate brief, and after the clerk notified him that the brief was past due and that the appeal was subject to dismissal, he did not file the required brief or respond to the court's direction.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The appeal arose from the County Civil Court at Law No. 3, Harris County, Texas. The First Court of Appeals notified appellant that his brief was overdue and directed him to file the brief and a motion for extension within ten days. Appellant did not respond, and the court dismissed the appeal for want of prosecution.

DISPOSITION

dismissed
