

NEBRASKA SUPREME COURT

State v. Jacob

309 Neb. 401 (2021) · No. No. S-20-584 · Decided June 4, 2021

SUMMARY

The Nebraska Supreme Court affirmed the denial of Steven Jacob’s motion for forensic DNA testing under Nebraska’s DNA Testing Act and his related requests for appointed counsel and to alter or amend the judgment. The court held that testing the shell casings, cartridge, and potential biological evidence would not produce noncumulative, exculpatory evidence relevant to Jacob’s wrongful-conviction claim. The court also rejected Jacob’s challenge concerning the bill of exceptions.

PRACTICE AREAS

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the district court abused its discretion by denying Jacob's motion for DNA testing under Neb. Rev. Stat. § 29-4120(5)(c).
2. Whether the district court abused its discretion by denying appointment of counsel under the Nebraska DNA Testing Act.
3. Whether the district court erred or abused its discretion in deeming Jacob's motion to alter or amend abandoned and denying it.
4. Whether the district court failed to provide the correct bill of exceptions for appellate review.

HOLDINGS

1. The district court properly denied DNA testing because the requested testing would not produce noncumulative, exculpatory evidence relevant to Jacob's wrongful-conviction claim.
2. The nonpresence of an individual's DNA profile in a biological sample does not preclude that individual from having been present or possessing the tested item; it shows only that the individual's DNA was not present in the specific sample tested.
3. The district court did not abuse its discretion by denying appointment of counsel because Jacob failed to show that DNA testing may be relevant to his wrongful-conviction claim.
4. Even assuming the district court erred by deeming Jacob's motion to alter or amend abandoned for failure to comply with the local hearing-notice rule, Jacob was not deprived of a substantial right because the Supreme Court independently concluded that denial of DNA testing was proper.
5. Jacob's bill-of-exceptions arguments were meritless because the bill of exceptions had been filed, contained the materials from the DNA-testing hearings, and the prior trial records remained part of the case and available for review.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“DNA evidence is not a videotape of a crime, and testing only shows whether the blood in question belonged to the person tested against.” (at 414)

“Thus, the nonpresence of an individual’s DNA profile in a biological sample does not preclude that individual from having been present or in possession of the item tested.” (at 413)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Jacob was convicted of the 1989 shooting deaths of Melody Hopper and James Etherton. Crime-scene evidence included shell casings, a live 9-mm cartridge, Jacob's fingerprints on a removed storm window, evidence that Jacob owned a 9-mm pistol, eyewitness identification, and incriminating statements attributed to Jacob. Jacob sought modern DNA testing of the casings, cartridge, slugs, and a living-room gauze sample, arguing that testing might show another person's DNA and support theories that he was not the shooter. The district court found that any anticipated results would be inconclusive and would not produce noncumulative, exculpatory evidence.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Jacob was convicted after retrial of two murders and related firearm offenses, and his convictions and sentences were affirmed on appeal. In 2019 he sought DNA testing of shell casings, an unfired cartridge, and possible biological evidence from the crime scene. The district court denied testing, appointment of counsel, and in forma pauperis status; it later deemed his motion to alter or amend abandoned and denied it. The Nebraska Supreme Court affirmed.

DISPOSITION
