

FIRST COURT OF APPEALS OF TEXAS AT HOUSTON

Eric Samuel Tucker v. State

Tucker v. State · No. 01-15-000?-CR · Decided May 14, 2015

SUMMARY

This appears to be a per curiam document from a Texas intermediate appellate court concerning Eric Samuel Tucker's criminal or post-conviction proceedings. The OCR text references constitutional claims, alleged ineffective assistance, prosecutorial conduct, evidentiary issues, and challenges concerning testimony and the conviction. The disposition and underlying offense cannot be reliably determined from the corrupted text.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether Tucker was entitled to appellate or extraordinary relief based on the numerous alleged constitutional, evidentiary, prosecutorial, and ineffective-assistance errors identified in his pro se filing.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The text identifies Tucker as a pro se criminal litigant and contains allegations concerning counsel's performance, prosecutorial conduct, evidence, testimony, jury-related matters, and constitutional protections. The supplied OCR is substantially degraded and does not reliably identify the underlying offense, conviction, or specific factual record.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The supplied text indicates that Tucker, proceeding pro se, challenged aspects of a criminal prosecution or conviction, including alleged ineffective assistance, prosecutorial misconduct, evidentiary errors, and constitutional violations. The court issued a per curiam disposition on August 14, 2015.

DISPOSITION

dismissed
