

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SEVENTH CIRCUIT

Pavey v. Conley

544 F.3d 739 (7th Cir. 2008) · No. 07-1426 · Decided September 12, 2008

SUMMARY

The United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit amended its June 5, 2008 slip opinion concerning the procedure for resolving contested exhaustion of administrative remedies in prisoner litigation. The order requires a hearing and appropriate discovery on exhaustion before merits proceedings, while allowing limited pre-resolution merits discovery in exceptional cases where exhaustion and merits issues share common facts.

CASE DETAILS

COURT	United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit
WRITING FOR THE COURT	Per Curiam; Richard A. Posner; Kenneth F. Ripple; Daniel A. Manion
JURISDICTION	Federal
DECIDED	September 12, 2008
DOCKET	07-1426
DISPOSITION	other
PROCEDURAL POSTURE	The defendants appealed from proceedings in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Indiana concerning the procedure for resolving a contested exhaustion-of-administrative-remedies issue in a prisoner's civil-rights action.
PRECEDENTIAL VALUE	published
PARTIES	Patrick Conley, Robert Watts, Laurence Grott, et al. v. Christopher R. Pavey

TOPICS

- prisoners rights
- discovery dispute
- civil procedure
- appellate procedure

PRACTICE AREAS

- prisoner civil rights
- civil procedure
- appellate procedure

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. What procedure should a district court follow when exhaustion of administrative remedies is contested in a prisoner's action?
2. When may discovery concerning the merits begin before the exhaustion issue has been resolved?

HOLDINGS

1. When exhaustion is contested, the district judge must conduct a hearing on exhaustion and permit whatever discovery relating to exhaustion the judge deems appropriate. If the prisoner did not exhaust, the judge must determine whether the prisoner still has remedies to exhaust, whether the failure was innocent and permits another opportunity to exhaust, or whether the failure was the prisoner's fault and ends the case.
2. If the judge determines that the prisoner properly exhausted administrative remedies, the case proceeds to pretrial discovery and, if necessary, trial on the merits; at a jury trial, the jury makes all necessary factual findings without being bound by or informed of the judge's exhaustion findings.
3. In the ordinary case, discovery on the merits should be deferred until the exhaustion issue is resolved, although district courts may permit limited merits-related discovery in exceptional cases when expeditious resolution requires it.

KEY QUOTATIONS

"The sequence to be followed in a case in which exhaustion is contested is therefore as follows: (1) The district judge conducts a hearing on exhaustion and permits whatever discovery relating to exhaustion he deems appropriate." (2)

"We emphasize that in the ordinary case discovery with respect to the merits should be deferred until the issue of exhaustion is resolved." (2)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The case involved a prisoner's claim and a contested question whether he had exhausted available administrative remedies. The exhaustion issue and the merits shared common facts concerning the gravity of the injury to the plaintiff's arm. The amended order addressed how the district court should manage exhaustion-related discovery before proceeding to the merits.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The appeal arose from a prisoner civil-rights action docketed in the Northern District of Indiana as No. 03 C 662. On September 12, 2008, the Seventh Circuit amended its June 5, 2008 slip opinion by replacing portions describing the sequence district courts must follow when exhaustion is contested.

DISPOSITION

other

