QUESTIONS PRESENTED

- Whether the appeal should be dismissed because the appellant failed to pay the appellate filing fee and the clerk's-record fee, failed to establish indigence, and failed to respond to the court’s notices.

HOLDINGS

1. An appeal may be involuntarily dismissed when the appellant fails to pay the required filing and clerk's-record fees, fails to establish indigence, and fails to respond after notice that dismissal may result.

KEY QUOTATIONS

"We dismiss the appeal."

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The appeal arose from a protective order signed on July 22, 2025. The appellant did not pay the appellate filing fee or the fee for the clerk's record, did not establish indigence, and did not respond to the court's notices concerning those deficiencies.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The trial court signed a protective order on July 22, 2025. On appeal, the appellant failed to pay the filing fee and the fee for the clerk's record and did not establish indigence after receiving notices warning that the appeal could be dismissed. The Court of Appeals dismissed the appeal and dismissed pending motions as moot.

DISPOSITION
