QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the ALJ's residual functional capacity assessment adequately accounted for the state-agency psychologists' limitation to superficial interaction.
2. Whether the ALJ properly evaluated the persuasiveness of Dr. Ahmed's medical opinion under the revised Social Security medical-opinion regulations.
3. Whether substantial evidence and proper legal standards supported the Commissioner's determination that Venaziano was not disabled.

HOLDINGS

1. The ALJ adequately explained the partially persuasive treatment of the state-agency psychologists' opinions and sufficiently accounted for the supported social-interaction limitations through restrictions including occasional interaction, less-than-occasional interaction outside the scope of employment, and avoidance of tandem work.
2. The ALJ adequately considered the supportability and consistency of Dr. Ahmed's opinion and reasonably found it only partially persuasive.
3. The Commissioner's final decision denying benefits was supported by substantial evidence and applied proper legal standards; the magistrate judge therefore recommended affirmance.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“No principle of administrative law or common sense requires us to remand a case in quest of a perfect opinion unless there is reason to believe that the remand might lead to a different result.” (Tr. 35)

“Tandem tasks “logically require more than superficial interpersonal contact. This is a restriction on the quality of interpersonal contact.”” (Tr. 36)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Venaziano alleged disability based primarily on bipolar disorder, severe depression, personality disorder, and anxiety, later amending her alleged onset date to June 1, 2021. The medical record reflected recurring anxiety and depressive symptoms, medication changes, counseling, and generally normal cognition and thought processes on examinations, with periods of improvement, stable mood, increased activity, and no breakthrough anxiety. A treating psychiatrist offered an extreme, work-preclusive functional assessment, while state-agency psychologists found moderate mental limitations and capacity for work with restrictions. The ALJ found severe physical and mental impairments but determined that Venaziano could perform restricted light work and other jobs existing in significant numbers.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Venaziano applied for disability benefits in February 2023. After the applications were denied initially and on reconsideration, an ALJ held a hearing on May 2, 2024, and found her not disabled. The Appeals Council denied review on April 30, 2025, making the ALJ's decision final. Venaziano filed this action under 42 U.S.C. § 405(g), and the parties completed briefing. The magistrate judge recommended affirming the Commissioner's decision.
