QUESTIONS PRESENTED

- Whether a life sentence constitutes impermissible indefinite imprisonment under article I, section 17 of the Florida Constitution.

HOLDINGS

1. A life sentence is not impermissible indefinite imprisonment under article I, section 17 of the Florida Constitution.

KEY QUOTATIONS

“A life sentence is not impermissible “indefinite imprisonment” under the Florida Constitution.” (Opinion at 1)

“It is abundantly clear that the Legislature, by prescribing a sentence of life imprisonment, intends that the defendant remain in prison for the rest of his life. The term ‘life’ is sufficiently definite so that it can be understood and applied.” (Opinion at 1)

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Padgett was serving a life sentence and argued that the sentence constituted impermissible indefinite imprisonment under article I, section 17 of the Florida Constitution. The appellate court relied on Florida Supreme Court and Third District precedent holding that a life sentence is sufficiently definite because it requires imprisonment for the remainder of the defendant's life.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Padgett appealed from the Circuit Court for Miami-Dade County, where Richard Hersch was the presiding judge. The Third District Court of Appeal rejected the constitutional challenge to the life sentence and affirmed.

DISPOSITION

affirmed
